HYDE QUIZ DISCLOSES HEAVY SHORT SELLING OF WHEAT BY SOVIETS

AMTORG SUBSIDIARY DEALS ARE EXPOSED

5,000,000 Bushels Bought in Bear Movement, Firm Admits.

DELIVERY IN AMERICA BY REDS IMPOSSIBLE

Discovery that the Soviet government of Russia, through the All-Russian Textile Syndicate, a subsidiary of the Amtorg Trading Co., has been selling wheat short on the Chicago market with the obvious intention of depressing the price, yesterday prompted Secretary of Agriculture Hyde to call upon the Chicago Board of Trade for rigid enforcement of its regulations against market manipulation.

Secretary Hyde's action, taken after a conference with President Hoover, was in the form of a telegram to John A. Bunnell, president of the Chicago Board of Trade, in which Secretary Hyde said:

"An inquiry was undertaken by the Department of Agriculture in consequence of certain rumors. This inquiry revealed beyond all question of doubt heavy short selling of wheat upon the Chicago market by the Russian government. There can be no question that this selling has contributed to the fall in the price of wheat and to the injury of American farmers now engaged in their intensive marketing season. Obviously, it would be impossible for Soviet Russia to deliver grain in Chicago over our tariff of 42 cents a bushel. I should be glad to know from you what provision your exchange has made or can make for the protection of our American farmers from such activities."

Hoover Told of Admission.

President Hoover was informed by Secretary Hyde that an investigation by the grain administration of the Department of Agriculture had brought an admission from officials of the Amtorg Co. that its subsidiary had sold at least 5,000,000 bushels of wheat for December delivery within the past few weeks.

No explanation was offered by officials of the Russian company and none was advanced officially here beyond the fact that Russia was deliberately bearing the wheat on the theory that the present price was too high and bound to go lower. The prospect of Russia actually delivering wheat in the American market in the face of the 42-cent tariff on the product when the Liverpool market now is higher than Chicago was considered absurd.

The only other opinion advanced here is that the action is a part of the alleged campaign of the Soviet government to take advantage of the depressed price situation and promote discontent.

Facts Learned by Probe.

The department's investigation, it was learned, resulted from press market reports that Russian agents had been active on the short side of the wheat market for several weeks while the prices went down steadily until Chicago quotations for wheat futures ranged from 9 to 10 cents lower than Liverpool. These reports said that the Russians had sold more than 15,000,000 bushels short in December and March wheat, but they have admitted to participation in the bear movement only to the extent of 5,000,000.

With the recent failure of the Treasury Department to establish contentions of American industry that Russia was dumping commodities, including lumber, pulpwood and manganese in the United States in violation of the tariff act, the Department of Agriculture apparently is faced also with lack of legal authority to proceed, except so far as the grain futures act is applicable.

Provisions of Law.

Under provisions of this law the Government grants licenses to boards of trade, and one section requires the governing boards of grain exchanges to prevent manipulation of prices and cornering of grain markets. Whether the law gives the department authority to revoke these licenses for failure to control alleged manipulation still is a legal question in the department and has been since enactment of the grain futures act.

Dr. J. W. T. Duvel, chief of the grain futures administration, who has directed investigation of reports of Russian activity, is inclined to doubt authority of the department in this regard, while others contend that

Calvin Coolidge

Says: In the conduct of popular government, in the maintenance of liberty, releasing the human mind from artificial restraints so that the people may be free to pursue the truth and follow the rule of conscience, a broad spirit of toleration is necessary. This is only another name for a becoming humility. None of us knows all there is to know. While our way may be best for us some different way may be best for others.

In a world of limitations we can not expect perfection. But we ought not to permit any confusion between toleration and complacency. We have certain legal and social standards that support all progress. They are not easy to maintain. Their value often does not appear to the young and the thoughtless. It may be thought we can have a little graft in government and business without much harm. But if an attitude of complacency is adopted towards such conduct it will be but a short time before the whole political and social fabric is corroded by corruption.

The present activity in several localities by both governmental and volunteer agencies in attempts to reform such abuses is a most wholesome spectacle of revolt against complacency.

MAN'S WIFE SHOOTS WOMAN OF CAPITAL

UNWRITTEN LAW CITED

(Picture on Page Two.)

Mrs. Elsie Davis clung tenaciously to life in Providence Hospital last night, where she was sent by a bullet fired by Mrs. Lulu M. Gamble, who meted out her own punishment when the woman and her husband refused to cease their alleged attentions to each other.

Mrs. Gamble, the confessed assailant, last night was released on $500 bail by La Plata, Md., authorities. Her husband, who is charged with beating his wife, was released on $300 bail.

Mrs. Gamble, the mother of ten children, readily admitted to Justice Walter H. Gray in the La Plata Courthouse yesterday that she shot the woman while near the Gamble home in the outskirts of La Plata while she was in the company of her husband at 2 o'clock yesterday morning.

The unwritten law was invoked by the elder woman after repeated protestations to stop their relationship had been made to her husband and Mrs. Davis, who lives at 2249 Shannon place southeast.

Mrs. Gamble told the court that she had lain in wait for her husband to return with Mrs. Davis and had shot her, claiming justification for her act in her alleged alienation of her husband's affection.

In spite of warnings, Mrs. Gamble said, her husband took Mrs. Davis for a ride on Thursday night. "I waited and waited," she said. "Then I went and got the pistol." As Gamble's car drove up near their home, she said, she took her two sons, Billy and Chester, 10. She opened the door and fired the shot into Mrs. Davis' forehead.

Gamble then pulled the gun from her hand, she said, and pointed it at her, tried to fire it, but it failed to go off. She explained that she had pulled the safety catch.

Her husband told a different story. He declared that he had taken the

JURY INDICTS FOUR IN JUDGESHIP QUIZ

BONDS OF $2,500 FIXED

New York, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—Charges that former magistrate George F. Ewald bought his appointment to the bench for $10,000 today resulted in the indictment of Ewald, his wife, Bertha, and two other persons by a special grand jury.

The Ewalds, indicted on three counts, were arraigned before Supreme Court Justice McCook soon afterward and were held in $2,500 bail each.

Their attorneys were granted until Monday morning to bring in for arraignment the other two persons indicted—Martin J. Healy, Tammany district leader and resigned city official who allegedly received the $10,000, and Thomas T. Tommaney, resigned sheriff's clerk, accused of acting as go-between in transferring the money.

A statement from the office of the attorney general, who was empowered by Gov. Roosevelt to investigate the Ewald case, said the three crimes charged against the Ewalds are:

"Requesting of Martin J. Healy the appointment of George F. Ewald as city magistrate of the City of New York, and with undertaking and with subsequently paying the sum of $10,000 to Martin J. Healy, pursuant to and in connection with such request.

"Making payment of valuable consideration, namely $10,000, to Martin J. Healy in consideration for and upon condition that George F. Ewald receive the appointment to the office of city magistrate.

"In the third count, George F Ewald is charged with the crime of accepting the appointment to the public office of city magistrate upon the payment of $10,000 to Martin J. Healy. Bertha Ewald is named as a principal in this crime in that George F. Ewald accepted the appointment with direct and indirect counsels, commands and inducements

LOANS HALTED AS LAST SHARK EXPOSE NEARS

LAW HERE PROTECTS PUBLIC FROM LENDER

EXPLANATION OF ACT CITES TYPICAL CASE

By AUSTIN T. ROGERS.

A group of Washington's most disreputable and nefarious loan sharks went into a huddle in a downtown office yesterday in an attempt to devise ways and means to evade the consequences of their fraudulent and illegal activities.

The best decision they could reach, according to information obtained by The Post, was that it would be quite wise to lay low for a while until they could discover exactly how extensive is the information which The Post will deliver to District authorities immediately upon completion of this series.

That this course met with general approval among the loan sharks was evidenced by the fact that during the afternoon it was practically impossible for anyone to negotiate a loan. An unidentified representative of The Post made the rounds after being advised of the conference.

In each instance he was asked first what security he could offer. If he said he wanted a loan on personal indorsements, he was advised that the loan shark took nothing but real estate. If he offered real estate as collateral, he was told that automobiles only were acceptable. If he countered with an offer of an automobile, he was informed that the particular car he had to offer was not sufficinetly valuable to justify a loan of $100.

$6,000 Car Turned Down.

When he offered a practically new $6,000 car—which he created out of thin air for the purpose—the loan shark told him that if such a car was put up as collateral, the loan would have to be at least $2,000. And so it went in all of the dozen or so loan-shark offices visited.

Two loan sharks at least, it was discovered, have folded up and vanished. One of them did go to the extent of announcing that he was going on a vacation trip to Europe, while the other neglected to notify anyone of his plans; he merely locked up his office and has not been seen for two days.

But regardless of what the loan sharks may consider doing for their own protection, the laws of the District, while not perfect, perhaps, at least give borrowers adequate protection against the loan sharks.

A borrower who has obtained any money from a lender under agreement to pay more than a total of 1 per cent per month including all interest and other charges, not only need not pay any interest on charges, but also he need not pay back a cent more than 75 per cent of the amount he actually borrowed.

That is not mere rumor; it is the actual interpretation of the law, and anyone who doubts it may read for himself the rulings set forth in the act of February 4, 1913, commonly referred to as the "loan shark law," in the volume entitled "Acts of Congress Applicable to the District of Columbia." That volume may be found in the Library of Congress, any public library, any lawyer's office, or any of the various offices having anything to do with legal affairs in the District Government.

FLOE CRASH WRECKS CAMP; SPELLS DOOM

By ULRICH SALCHOW.

Stockholm, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—Salomon August Andree and his two comrades on their pioneer polar balloon expedition 33 years ago, failed by 500 miles in their attempt to reach the North Pole and three days after setting out from Dane's Island, Spitzbergen, came down on the Arctic ice wilderness.

Examination of the diary found on Andree's body after Dr. Gunnar Horn's expedition had brought it back to Tromsoe, Norway, has revealed the secret of the party's landing and wanderings until they made the camp on desolate White Island where they were destined to perish.

After coming down through an unknown cause in latitude 83 north, longitude 30 east, the explorers remained encamped on the ice for a week.

Covered 200-Mile Trek.

The position given is almost due north of White Island, it is on a line between the island and the North Pole, goal of the heroic pioneers of aerial polar exploration. It is less than half way between the two points, being nearer the island. The distance from the pole is roughly 500 miles, and from White Island roughly 200 miles.

The explorers, therefore, covered a 200-mile trek back to the camp where they died.

Fire started on the balloon, the diary reveals, at 7 p. m. on the day previous (July 13). This was immediately extinguished.

Apparently it caused little serious damage, for the last entry in the diary referring to the balloon's voyage says "the balloon again rose but both valves were then opened in preparation for a landing."

Previous entries show that wet weather, ice and hoar frost had weighted down the big gas bag, and that the gondola had been dragged along the ice many times during the latter part of the flight from Spitzbergen.

Prepared for Trip.

During the week following the descent on the ice—from July 14 to July 21—the explorers remained encamped on the ice, preparing for their hazardous sledge journey back to a hoped-for safety.

On the afternoon of the 22d the party packed up their belongings and started over the ice.

On July 22, eleven days after they flew away from Spitzbergen, they abandoned their temporary shelter and set out on the long trek back to civilization.

Fought Treacherous Ice.

The doomed men day after day, the diary reveals, struggled on toward safety in a constant battle with creaking, treacherous ice and deep pools of fresh water, which they had to cross with their frail canvas boat.

They marched, not toward the northern coast of Spitzbergen, whence their balloon had brought them and where

No matter how conscientious and efficient prohibition enforcement agents are, how many raids and arrests they make, how much evidence they obtain, the dry law will not be enforced unless the United States attorneys prosecute vigorously.

Charles H. Tuttle, United States Attorney in the Southern District of New York, presides over the largest office of the sort in the country; yet the lack of prosecution of prohibition cases in this district is without parallel in any part of the United States.

Mr. Tuttle has ten or twelve assistant United States attorneys assigned to prohibition cases, and in his prohibition unit are at least fifty employes. United States

MANUEL MALBRAN FAVORED FOR ENVOY

Argentine Diplomat Called Persona Grata by State Department.

ONCE SERVED IN CAPITAL

(Associated Press.)

The Argentine Embassy last night announced that Manuel Malbran, a former Ambassador to this post, had been described persona grata by the State Department for appointment as envoy.

Embassy officials said that the information that Senor Malbran had been found acceptable by this Government was transmitted to them late yesterday afternoon. They expressed keen satisfaction at the rapidity with which the United States acceded to Gen. Jose Francisco Uriburu's request that he be considered for teh post.

Senor Malbran served here as ambassador for three months in 1928. He withdrew on instruction from former President Hipolito Irigoyen, and it was understood that afterward his relations with the Irigoyen government became strained.

Senor Malbran initiated his diplomatic career as secretary of embassy here. A career diplomat, he has served for many years in Venezuela, Mexico, Chile and the United States. The State Department last night declined to comment upon the matter.

SPEAKERS ASK FIDAC TO WORK FOR PEACE

Hurley, Speaking at Dinner, Declares U. S. Policy One of Amity.

MOUNT VERNON VISITED

Buoyed by addresses giving assurance of a mounting international peace sentiment, delegates to the eleventh annual congress of Fidac last night received with acclaim from Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley a ringing enunciation of this Nation's policy of amity in which "my country has no imperialistic designs."

Speaking "on behalf of the Government and my comrades of the World War," Secretary Hurley addressed the 200 and more delegates from the nine nations represented in the Federation Interallies Des Anciens Combattants at a dinner at the Congressional Country Club, in which he presided as toastmaster.

Marked by several other speeches, the dinner featured the second day's round of activities in the four-day gathering in Washington, an important event of which proved to be a visit of the delegates early yesterday afternoon to Mount Vernon, where a gold palm wreath was laid on the tomb of George Washington in the name of the British Legion by its chairman, Col. John Brown, vice president of Fidac for Great Britain.

In a comparatively brief business session yesterday morning, the organization postponed selection of its officers and the choice of a meeting place in 1931 until a meeting to be held next Tuesday at Culver, Ind. The principal speaker at the session was Assistant Secretary of the Navy Ernest Lee Jahncke, who praised the efforts

Death of Ruth Alexander Reveals Marriage Tangle

Olathe, Kans., Sept. 19 (A.P.).—Ruth Alexander, 24-year-old aviatrix, fell to her death at San Diego yesterday apparently unaware that a divorce had not been granted her second husband here prior to her marriage last June 21 at Yuma, Ariz., to Robert A. Elliott, Naval reserve flier.

An unanswered letter from the aviatrix in the district court files revealed today she was under the impression a decree had been granted the second husband, Mac Alexander, farmer near here.

She wrote June 2, several weeks before her marriage to Elliott, saying she "understood" a divorce had been obtained by Alexander and requested that papers in the case be forwarded.

No reply was made to the letter and the belief was expressed by Alexander and attorneys that she assumed in the absence of an answer she was free to remarry.

Miss Naomi Ayres, district court clerk, explained she had delayed answering the letter, intending to send a reply after the case had been finally settled.

The woman flier's first marriage to Aldon Fanuelson, of near Irving, Kans., her old home town, became known to Alexander and her friends here only today. Then known by her maiden name of Ruth Blaney, she eloped and was married to Fanuelson at Richmond, Mo., in 1925.

A year later they were divorced.

Her marriage to Elliott also was unknown to Alexander and to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Blaney, of

Elizabeth, N. J., Sept. 19 (A.P.).—While raiding the Rising Sun Brewery today, a squad of prohibition agents was attacked by a gang of eleven gunmen, one of whom shot and killed John Finello, 40, a dry officer from Philadelphia.

The gunmen entered the ancient, fortress-like structure almost on the heels of the Government men. The killer seized the leader of the raiding party, Robert Young, and, using him as a shield, opened fire with two pistols. Three bullets struck Finello.

Utmost confusion followed. Dozens of city police and State troopers dashed to the scene, and, although a full account of the shooting was not available hours after it took place, it was believed that all of the gunmen escaped.

With guns drawn and tear gas ready, State troopers stalked into the building, believing that at that time the gangsters had not left.

A locksmith, hastily called, opened the brewery's safe, and police said that among other documents they found a complete list of registration numbers of all prohibition agents working out of the Newark office.

Government raiders drove up from Philadelphia to conduct the raid on orders from John D. Pennington, prohibition administrator for New Jersey. Young said he believed that the gunmen either trailed the car

NEWS of SUBURBAN Washington and the Surrounding States

Appears on Pages 2 and 18 Today

food depots had been prepared, but in more easterly direction.

Their coast was toward the little-known regions north of Fridjof Nansen Land (then known as Franz Josef Land).

The distance they covered each day varied considerably, but they never could do better than a few miles. Their astronomical observations show that the westward drift of the rough ice over which painfully they made their way had begun to prove too much for them.

Finally, on August 4, when they had been marching for about thirteen days, the heroic litle band, defeated by the drift in the efforts to the east, were forced to abandon this route.

So strong was the westward ice drift that it appears the explorers were carried westward faster than they could walk to the east. The powerful drift seems to have swept them to the west of their landing point, in longitude 30 east.

Giving in to the drift, they decided to utilize it in a belated attempt to reach the Seven Islands, off Spitzbergen, and turned southwestward. On the Seven Islands, they knew, was an important food depot.

New March Started.

In starting the new march they were in latitude 82.17 north and longitude 22.43 east. This was roughtly 60 miles east and slightly south of the point where they had come down in their balloon.

In the thirteen days it had taken them to conquer this distance, their provisions had begun to run low. The scanty supplies salvaged from the balloon's gondola had to be eked out by chance kills of polar bears—"the wandering meat shops of the Arctic," as Andree cals them in the diary.

With each successful kill, the prospects of the explorers brightened and their hopes were renewed. But there came a time when there were no more bears, and hunger pangs warned them that starvation might follow. All felt the weakening effects of short rations.

During this long and painful trudge over the crumbling, treacherous ice, one after another of the three dauntless explorers fell into the pools dotting the ice surface or into concealed crevasses.

But the diary shows that despite their sufferings they never lost heart. Encouraged by Andree, they kept up one another's spirits with jokes and laughter.

Noted Samples of Clay.

The leader of the expedition showed his heroism in many ways. In the face of the terrors and fatigues and uncertainty of the trek, Andree continued conscientiously to fill his diary day by day with scientific observations of the utmost interest.

Not only did he do this, but when every ounce of extra weight must have added to the already burdensome difficulties of the explorers, he collected samples of interesting finds along the line of march.

He notes some 20 bits of clay, gravel, moss and driftwood that he picked up on the ice. One of the samples he dried on his bare chest.

Throughout the diary the entries frequently show his solicitude for these specimens, which he believed might prove of great importance in future study of the polar ice drift.

Thus slowly and painfully the three explorers approached the northern coast of Spitsbergen, wearily making on foot a longer journey than only a few weeks before they had sailed by balloon.

Their chief respite from fatigue was an opportunity from time to time to load the whole of their equipment in the canvas boat they had frequently used since leaving the balloon. To row a few miles amid the ice floes in the occasional open waters of the Arctic, even in this fragile boat, was to enjoy a few hours of comparative rest.

Seaweed Used as Food.

Hunger at the same time sharpened their skill at picking up nourishment from the most unpromising sources, on or under the surface of the ice.

Knut Frankel became adept in preparing what Andree calls a "blood pancake" as a substitute for bread. Nils Strindberg's specialty was creating dishes from the raw materials of seaweed.

Off the northern coast of Northeast Land, in the Spitsbergen group, the explorers reached shallower waters, and here suddenly the direction of the ice drift began to change.

The effect of the changed drift immediately was to cut them off even from their goal on the Seven Islands.

Between September 12, about a month after they left Danes Island on the polar flight, and September 17, the ice drifted with the hapless explorers for more than 100 kilometers in an east-southeast direction, steadily bearing them away from the food depot.

Meanwhile autumn was at hand, the days were growing shorter and shorter, and the cold was becoming increasingly bitter. The explorers' insufficient nourishment made cold all the harder to bear.

White Island Sighted.

Marooned on the drifting ice, the three men at length resigned themselves to spending a Crusoe-like winter of isolation on a suitable "ice-float." They set to work building what the diary describes as an "ice-cot."

At last, on September 17, they sighted the tall ghostly peak of White Island, the first land they had seen since flying from Spitzbergern on July 11. In his diary Andree called it "New Iceland."

The sighting of land also brought them good luck in hunting. On the next day they killed their first seal, and on the 19th they bagged three more. On the 20th, after a long fast from bear meat, they managed to kill a polar bear.

The increased food supply sent their spirits soaring. Andree notes the stroke of good fortune and estimates his little band will have sufficient food to last until the April following.

A week later the three explorers moved into their newly finished ice cabin on the drifting floes. They christened it "The Home."

But disaster was just around the corner. A few days later, on the morning of October 2, it struck them. The ice floe on which they had built their little "home" suddenly split up with a thunderous sound, and the house of ice was shattered into a hundred pieces.

Worst of all, the party's equipment and provisions were dispersed and drifted about on chunks of the original ice floe.

In desperation the explorers had to plunge into the icy waters to rescue them. And in the midst of this unexpected blow, stricken in sight of land, Andree found too much to do to continue the heroic work of noting scientific specimens or even the account of their misfortunes. The diary abruptly comes to an end.

With this sturdy defiance of misfortunes ends the record of the three wanderers over the Arctic ice and seas from the end of their balloon flight to their sighting of the land that sheltered them until death.

How they reached it is not recorded in this diary. But in addition to the vivid account of the March, the diary settles the fact that all three clung together through the worst and implies they reached White Island still together.

It was there, in a camp laid bare by melting snows and ice, during an unusually warm and damp arctic summer, that Dr. Gunnar Horn, Norwegian scientist and explorer, on August 6 at last solved the riddle of their fate and brought back to the world the record of their sufferings.

Protected in Death.

Salomon August Andree in dying on lonely White Island, apparently the last survivor of his expedition, gave his last thought to the preservation of the record of his wanderings and hardships on the polar flight attempt.

A diary in which virtually every page had been written on was found inside his clothing when his body and the other relics of his expedition brought back by Dr. Gunnar Horn were examined at Tromsoe by Swedish and Norwegian experts It had been wrapped carefully and securely placed at his back. As his body was found in a reclining position beside the White Island camp, it is assumed that on feeling the approach of death, he lay down upon his precious record and protected it even in death with his body.

The personnel of the Cumberland office was augmented to between 35 and 40 agents from the Baltimore and Washington offices. Mr. Danforth was assisted in directing the raid by William Blanford, head of the Washington enforcement office, and Allegany County's sheriff, William R. Varvey, formerly a well-known prohibition officer.

The raids were directed at more than a score of speakeasies in this city, Frostburg, Mount Savage, Lonaconing and other towns in the county. Charges were sale and possession in the majority of cases, but one manufacture charge was also placed. The agents were armed with search warrants obtained on alleged sales to undercover men. Many of those arrested were previous offenders.

Jury Holds Mallon Death Accidental

Physician Testifies That Fall Could Have Caused Injuries.

Special to The Washington Post.

Chestertown, Md., Sept. 19.—Following a lengthy inquest here this afternoon into the death early last Friday of Joseph Harley Mallon, 23-year-old son of Joseph Mallon, of Philadelphia, real estate officer of the Continental Equitable Title & Trust Co., a jury called by Coroner Harry L. Dodd brought in a verdict of death by accident. Though the parents of the dead youth had Senator S. Scott Beck, their counsel, present a written request to the jury that such a verdict be brought in, the letter was not read until after the verdict was rendered, Coroner Dodd said.

David Clark and Joseph Hayden, of Philadelphia, companions of Mallon on the country place of Dr. William L. Clark, of Philadelphia, at Kenmore Park, near here, testified that they were in the Clark bungalow singing songs about 1 o'clock Friday morning when Mallon went out, presumably to go to another bungalow on the Clark estate. Half an hour later they found him lying at the foot of a windmill near the bungalow in an unconscious condition.

Thomas Drew, caretaker on the Clark estate, said Mallon had several times gone to the top of the tower to watch the working of the windmill.

OWN HAT MAY HIT RING

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

Former Senator James A. Reed's lost sheep, or the men who were left politically high and dry when he retired from the Senate, are converging upon New York for Reed's return from Europe tomorrow or Monday, to hear any momentous portents that may come from his wry lips and to give him every encouragement to return to the fight.

To a degree the senator's return is taking on the political importance of the late Theodore Roosevelt's homecoming from Africa. It is quite within the realm of possibility that some political bubbles may be burst, or the political atmosphere rent, to say the least.

Chief interest in the senator's return concerns how he will view recent Democratic developments whereby Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt has been pushed way out in front for the presidential nomination in 1932. The senator has no love for the New York crowd.

Explosion May Come.

It was with difficulty that he restrained himself in the preconvention fight of 1926 on the treatment he received at the hands of the crowd and matters were not helped any by the treatment accorded him at Houston. There was a serious question for a long time as to whether he would participate in the subsequent presidential campaign. And at that he did do any too much work.

Now when he returns and finds that the New Yorkers seem to have gone off with the party, lock, stock and barrel, that long restrained explosion might easily come.

The senator's friends are anxious for him to reenter politics, and in most any way he desires, either in the Missouri gubernatorial or senatorial campaign or in the presidential race of 1932.

The statement of Senator Hawes that he would retire in 1932 paves the way for Mr. Reed's return to the Senate, and some of his friends are particularly anxious for him to make this race.

He is widely reputed as having written to a friend some time before he left for Europe, however, that the Presidency was the only thing that would interest him.

Found Delegates Pledged.

Whether this reflected a lurking of that presidential ambition of 1928 is not known, but his Nation-wide radio attack on the radio trust a few weeks later was widely interpreted to mean that he still had presidential aspirations.

Now, if he has, it may very well be that he will consider recent Democratic developments in the light of his experience in 1928. There was probably never a time when he was more popular. He was at the crest of the tide. His brilliant career was at its height.

Yet when he announced his presidential candidacy and swung out around the country to get delegates he could hardly find a receptive ear. Everywhere he went he found that the Smith workers had been there a year before and sealed the delegation.

As a result, when the balloting began at Houston he had only his Missouri delegation, and, to make it worse, because of the peculiar set of circumstances at Houston, history will show that this man was way down on the list of presidential contenders, that even a Southerner from the politically inconspicuous State of Georgia, Senator George, was more seriously considered than he.

It is not an accurate picture at all, because, after Smith, Reed was the strongest man at the convention. History, however, recording the votes on that first and only ballot, will give an entirely different impression.

Political History Reversed.

The question is whether Reed, in the light of his experience then and assuming he has presidential aspirations now, will let Gov. Roosevelt get the lead that Smith had.

Political history before 1928 was that the man who got out in front too early was usually knocked off and a dark horse brought in. The nomination of both Gov. Smith and Mr. Hoover proved that this was not always so. Apparently Gov. Roosevelt's friends are moving in the light of the experience of these two gentlemen.

The question is whether Reed, a tempestuous soul, will be guided in the light of history.

He is perhaps the man whom the Roosevelt backers most fear, mainly because Reed looks upon the Democratic path to the White House as being through the South and the West, instead of the South and the East, as the Rooseveltians see it.

SCHOOL PRINCIPALS PLAN FOR NEW TERM

PROTEST ON TAX SUITS

ARLINGTON COUNTY,
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Cla. 500. Clarendon, Va.

Meeting in the auditorium of the Washington Lee High School yesterday morning, principals of the white schools of the county completed plans for opening the schools on Monday. All schools in the county, with the exception of the James Monroe School, will open at 9 o'clock. Delay in the opening of this school is due to adding four more classrooms. The school will open Monday, September 29.

Pupils entering grades 9 to 12 at Washington Lee will report Monday morning at 9 o'clock for registration. Those entering the seventh and eighth grades will report for registration Tuesday morning at the same hour. Classes will begin Wednesday morning.

As a result of construction work at the building the schedule of classes will be as follows until this work is completed:

Grades 9 to 12 will attend classes from 8 to 12:20 o'clock, those in grades 7 to 8 will attend classes from 12:25 to 4:25 o'clock.

Addressing the principals, Dr. N. Talley Ballou, of Richmond, director of oral hygiene, congratulated the county health department for the work which is being carried on by Dr. C. R. Boyland, county school dentist.

"Arlington County is the only county in the 100 counties in the State that carries on its dental clinics during the entire year," Dr. Ballou said.

County School Supt. Fletcher Kemp, in his address of welcome to principals, stressed the need of wholehearted cooperation. He assured Dr. Ballou of the cooperation of the principals, teachers and county school officials in the health work. Dr. P. M. Chichester, county health officer, outlined the work of his department and expressed appreciation of the cooperation given his department by the school staffs.

Colored principals and teachers met yesterday afternoon in the John M. Langston School at Halls Hill and completed plans for opening their schools on Monday.

This morning at 9:30 o'clock teachers of all white schools will meet in the auditorium at Washington-Lee, complete their plans for the school year and perfect the county teachers' organization. Officers will be elected.

The board of directors of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce yesterday adopted a resolution designating Hugh Lee Kirby, member of the board, as special speaker to address the other 99 chambers of commerce or commercial bodies representing the other 99 counties in the State and explain to them the benefits of the Cramton bill, known as H. R. 26.

It was pointed out in the resolution that it is understood that the National Capital Park and Planning Commission will designate two of its members to accompany Mr. Kirby with drawings, plans and pictures showing Washington and Arlington County as they exist today and how they will look when plans of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission are completed under authorization of the Cramton bill.

Another resolution offered was that by President Ashton C. Jones protesting against suits being filed for collection of delinquent real estate taxes. The resolution was adopted with but one dissenting vote. The resolution states that more than 1,000 suits have been filed against citizens of the county to sell their property for non-payment of taxes and that many of these do not date prior to 1927. These suits are brought without the mailing of any notice to those sued, a method that, according to the resolution, imposes large and unnecessary costs on the taxpayer.

The resolution calls upon the County Board of Supervisors to notify all delinquent taxpayers of the intention to bring suit and then give them 60 days in which to pay the taxes without the imposition of the exhorbitant cost now imposed.

Without a dissenting vote the board adopted the report of the county government committee, which worked with a like committee from the Arlington County Civic Federation, and which recommended the county manager form of government with a county board of five members.

A copy of the resolution will be sent to the State Department of Taxation, and to the County Board of Supervisors.

Plans have been completed for the banquet which will be given by the Arlington County Monarch Club at the Ashton Heights Woman's Club Tuesday night at 7 o'clock.

This will be "Monarch Night" in Arlington County, President A. B. Honts declared yesterday. Among honor guests will be members of Monarch Clubs from Baltimore, Richmond and Washington, together with representatives from more than 40 clubs in various sections of the country.

The program will include a number of musical selections and there will be dancing until midnight.

The General Assembly act provides that the operator of a dairy is not allowed to use botles of another nor bottles with no marks on them, and that the name of the dairy using the bottle must be on that bottle.

No date for a hearing in the case has yet been set.

Waiving hearing on the charge of illegal possession of liquor, Leola Ferguson was held for action of the grand jury by Police Judge Harry R. Thomas yesterday. Bond was fixed at $500. She was later released.

HIDDEN UNDER FLOWERS

Tromsoe, Norway, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—Coffins containing the earthly remains of Solomon August Andree, Nils Strindberg and Knut Frankel, pioneer polar aeronautic explorers, were carried aboard the Swedish gunboat Svenskund today and started on the last part of their journey home to an honored resting place in Stockholm.

The transfer of the coffins from Tromsoe Cathedral to the decks of the gunboat was accompanied by impressive ceremonies.

In the cathedral they were formally handed over to the Swedish authorities by Norwegian officials. Officers of the gunboat and of the Norwegian government steamer Michael Sars formed a guard of honor.

Then the coffins were borne by Swedish sailors through crowded streets to the quay near which the Svenskund was lying. As they were taken aboard the gunboat, a band played the Swedish national anthem. Flowers were heaped upon them until they were practically hidden.

The Svenskund immediately sailed for Stockholm, followed by the Michael Sars, which will accompany her for part of the voyage.

Prescription Rum Puts Pair in Toils

Hart Says Giving of False Names Makes Buying of Liquor Illegal.

Holding that prescription liquor can be illegally possessed Assistant United States Attorney David A. Hart in Police Court yesterday issued papers charging James Zeaman and George Pitkin Crokey with possession of liquor in violation of the national prohibition act.

The men when apprehended, according to the report made by police, had in their possession two pints of liquor which had been issued on prescriptions made out to other persons. Judge Gus A. Schuldt held each of the men under $500 bond after they had pleaded not guilty and demanded trial by jury. The men were arrested Thursday night by members of the special vice squad, while operating an automobile.

Mr. Hart, in explaining the issuance of papers, said: "While on the face of it prescription liquor may seem to be legal it can be illegal. In this case I believe that to be the fact. These men had the liquor, but the names they gave the police were not the names on the bottles. Therefore I think they were violating the prohibition act."

OUTSIDE WORK BAN PLACED UPON POLICE

Firemen Are Also Included in an Order Issued by Commissioners.

REPORT IS PRESENTED

Policemen and firemen were forbidden by the District Commissioners yesterday to engage in any outside work.

The order was recommended by Maj. Henry G. Pratt, superintendent of police, and George S. Watson, chief of the Fire Department.

It is an outgrowth of long agitation. Several complaints have been received by District officials that members of both departments have engaged in outside work during their off-duty hours. This practice, it was complained, took jobs from men regularly engaged in the work in which the firemen and policemen took off-time fliers.

Chief Watson forwarded the Commissioners a report showing that 248 firemen, constituting 26 per cent of the authorized personnel, engaged in outside work in the course of the last year, earning something like $29,477, which is an average of $118.88 per man who engaged in outside work.

Similar statistics were not given for the Police Department. The heads of both departments declared that in view of the recent increased salary law enacted by Congress, for reasons of efficiency and other causes they believed that the department personnel should be restricted to working for the District in their official capacities, except, of course, such work as they might do in their ordinary life for themselves.

Approval was forecast several weeks ago by Commissioner Herbert B. Crosby, who conferred with Chief Watson, Maj. Pratt and representatives of the Central Labor Union. The authority of the Commissioners to enforce such a regulation was questioned in view of a court decision rendered several years ago, and the matter was put up to William W. Bride, corporation counsel, for an opinion. Mr. Bride said the proposed regulation would come within the legal authority of the Commissioners to prescribe reasonable regulations for the government of the conduct of the two forces.

Mouse in Bottle Causes Trouble

Found guilty on a threats charge Angelo Fabrioni, 67 years old, of 313 Thirteen and a half street northwest, yesterday was given a suspended sentence of $500 or 90 days by Judge Gus A. Schuldt in Police Court.

Fabrioni is alleged to have threatened the life of Cirillo Meggenti, operator of a store in the neighborhood. Two years ago Fabrioni was said to have gone to the store to get a soft drink. He swallowed the liquid and a mouse. Since then, according to testimony, there have been many negotiations for financial settlements with the bottling company.

Fabrioni told the judge he understood $3,000 had been paid the proprietor by the company, but that he only received $15. Meggenti declared no such sum ever was received and told the court that the story had ruined his business. He explained that he thought everything had been settled amicably until Thursday, when, he declares the other man came into the store and threatened his life.

St. Januarius' Blood Melts While All Naples Rejoices

Liquification Accepted by People as Pledge That City Will Be Protected From Harm—Cathedral Thronged for Strange Revivification of Relic.

Naples, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—The liquefaction of the treasured blood of St. Januarius, patron of Naples, taken by all Neapolitans to be a sure sign of Divine grace, was believed to have occurred today in the southern metropolis' great cathedral to the intense joy of a large congregation.

The recurrence of this strange transformation, in which the dark and congealed blood of the saint, contained in an elaborate vase, suddenly becomes red and boils vigorously, was believed by the kneeling throng to mean that the heavenly protection which allowed Naples to escape with such little damage from the earthquake of July 23 would be extended to their city in the future.

Ever since the year 500 A. D. the unexplained revivification of the saint's blood has been observed at stated times, as today, on the St. Januarius' own feast day, during the first ten days of May, and last year on December 20.

Sometimes there is a day of waiting, and all Naples is in anguish at the thought of calamity to come. In 1884, prior to cholera epidemic, the miracle failed to occur in May as usual. In the following autumn the plague broke out, and people were dying by thousands every day.

On September 19 of that year the cathedral, as today, was filled with a praying throng. After an hour's urgent supplication the chaplain in charge of the service took the sacred phial in his trembling hands and walking out of the cathedral held it up before the waiting throng. As he intoned the first notes of the "Te Deum Laudamus," when he reached the outer threshold of the great church, the blood in the container began to boil and bubble. A mighty shout went up from the crowd. Soon afterward the epidemic had spent its force. In eight days it was over.

In 1872 the liquefaction failed to materialize. Instead Naples was visited by an eruption of Vesuvius in the spring and by cholera in the autumn.

This morning, owing to the lively recollections of that night of panic in July, the cathedral was filled from an early hour. At about 9 o'clock the bronze doors of the Saint's Chapel opened, and from the sacristy adjacent advanced a short but colorful procession of clergy.

Then there was brought forth from the reliquary containing two phials, one with the dark and clotted blood of the martyred bishop, the other empty. This second one also contained blood at one time. Prayer succeeded prayer, sometimes in a high key, sometimes murmuring, while the officiating prelate held up the little vase for the view of all. Finally the blood took on a reddish tinge and began to bubble.

WRESTLER IS SLAIN BY GANG IN CHICAGO

CAPONE BROTHER FREED

Chicago, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—Another slaying, possibly a gangland murder, confronted police today while they were searching fruitlessly for the gangsters named by the crime commission as "public enemies."

The victim was George Peters, a wrestler. Three men shot him to death in a soft drink parlor in Argo, a South Side suburb. Mike Lacakis was probably fatally wounded.

In their search for "public enemies," police raided the Lexington Hotel, South Michigan avenue Capone haunt, in a vain attempt to find Frank Nitti, reputed Capone lieutenant.

Freed on Conduct Charge.

Meanwhile, Mathew Capone, 20-year-old college boy brother of "Scarface Al," learned that it was not a crime to be related to the gang leader.

Mathew was freed of a charge of disorderly conduct and violation of the vehicle license law by Judge W. W. Damron, of Harrisburg, Ill., sitting in traffic court. He was arrested yesterday in a raid on the Capone home by police seeking Al and Brother Ralph, both "public enemies."

Judge John H. Lyle again headlined the court activities by calling Dominick Brancato and Dominick Bello "yellow cowards—only brave in pairs and with guns."

Judge Lyle agreed to give the pair, charged with carrying concealed weapons, a change of venue on the grounds that he was prejudiced against Italians if their attorney could prepare a petition before eighteen veniremen had been examined for a jury. The lawyer returned with the petition as the fourteenth juror was being sworn.

The judge abided by the agreement, but scored two signers of the petition.

One Salary Cited.

In the investigation of racketeering in unions, a gangster, Bernard O'Donnell, was said by State's attorney investigators to draw a salary of $4,435 from the commission drivers' union.

Delving into records seized in raids last Wednesday on the offices of several unions, assistant State's attorneys found the names of a half dozen gunmen and thugs who they said had forced their way in with guns and threats, only to loot the treasuries afterwards.

They found the names of George "Red" Barker, one of the crime commission's 26 "public enemies," a former convict and a perpetual bane of police. Listed, too, were James Belcastro, bomber, another "public enemy," "Mike de Pike" Heitler, vice monger;; Bernard O'Donnell, brother of the ill-reputed "Klondike," and J. Annorino, alias Genaro, brother of another public enemy, "Peppy" Genaro.

Discovery Held Good Start.

Prosecutors hailed the discovery as an important start in the campaign to rid the city of racketeers who, the Better Business Bureau has estimated, extort $130,000,000 a year from reputable Chicagoans with bombs, beatings and bullets.

Typical of the evidence found, prosecutors announced, was that Barker bought a $5,000 automobile at the expense of the Coal Teamsters Union, charged that body $200 a month for the car's upkeep and assessed the members $5,000 as pay to a lawyer who won Barker's freedom from a charge of murdering a policeman. For his "services" Barker drew $500 a month salary.

Belcastro found a sinecure by making himself president of the Gas Filling Station Owners Association and O'Donnell became a costly parasite on the Commission Drivers Union. His salary was $125 a week and he drew $50 monthly for automobile upkeep. Activities of the others in other unions was similar. In no case, authorities said, was there any evidence that the men did anything to earn their salaries.

PUBLIC PROTECTED BY LOAN LAW HERE

SHARKS ARE ON RETREAT

receive a greater rate of interest upon any loan made than 1 per cent per month on the actual amount of the loan, "and this charge shall cover all fees, expenses, demands, and services of every character, including notarial and record fees and charges," except upon the foreclosure of the security. Upon foreclosure, the lender is permitted to charge 10 per cent gross.

It is provided further in the law that this interest shall not be deducted from the principal of the loan when the loan is made.

The borrower is relieved of the need for paying usurious notes by that section of the loan shark law which provides that any person receiving a greater rate of interst than provided shall forfeit all interest so contracted for, and in addition thereto shall forfeit to the borrower a sum of money to be deducted from the amount due for principal equal to one-fourth of the principal sum.

Here is a concrete example, and any borrower now in the clutches of any loan shark in Washington can cash in on it gratis and without fear of any comeback from the loan shark:

Assume that a man has borrowed $100 from a loan shark and given the customary note for $140, payable in 20 weekly installments of $7 each.

That is a usurious rate because the law specifically states that any charge exceeding 5 per $100 over a period of five months is illegal.

Under the law, therefore, the borrower is required only to make his first first ten payments at the rate of $7 each and another of $5 and his account with the lender is closed. If the lender thinks he can get any more, he probably will prove upon psychopathic examination to be considerably dumber than the average.

Strong-Arm Tactics Used.

The only reason the loan shark manages to get away with his 900 per cent charges is because very few borrowers know what rights they have under the law. Borrowers think that because under intense stress they have let themselves in for exorbitant interest and other charges they are bound to pay. That belief is strengthened by the hard-boiled manner in which the loan shark lays down what he calls the law whenever a borrower misses a payment.

It makes not the least bit of difference, incidentally, if the loan shark poses as a mere broker whose function is to bring the borrower and the lender together. The loan shark is the one from whom the borrower actually receives the money and to whom he makes his payments, and the law does not permit the loan shark to hide behind any camouflage such as naming a third party as payee on the note.

The loan shark act further requires any one engaged in the business of loaning money at a rate greater than 6 per cent to procure a license, for which a bond of $5,000, payable to the District of Columbia, must be posted.

Although there are scores of loan sharks now operating in the District at usurious rates, not a single license has been asked or issued. Every one of these money lenders, then, is violating the license section of the loan shark law, and thereby is liable to a fine of not less than $25 nor more than $200, and imprisonment of not less than five days nor more than 30 days, or both.

The law provides also that none but residents of the District may obtain licenses to operate as money lenders.

No Licenses Issued.

Applications for licenses must be made to the District Commissioners and shall contain a statement as to whether the applicant is a corporation, individual, &c., and the license when granted must be displayed conspicuously in the place of business. The most exhaustive search would fail to reveal any such licenses in any loan shark's office, displayed or otherwise, for the very simple reason, as stated above, that no such licenses have been issued.

The loan sharks, however, will hear more on this subject direct, as District officials already have taken preliminary steps in a drive to eliminate these fraudulent usurers.

It is provided further in the law that every person, firm, corporation or other agency conducting such lending business must keep a register, approved by the District Commissioners, showing the amount of money loaned, the date when loaned and when due, the person to whom loaned, the property or thing named as security for the loan, and also the amount of interest, all fees, commissions, charges and rental charges, in whatever name, with the proviso as stated heretofore that in no instance shall the total of all such items amount to more than 1 per cent per month on the actual amount loaned.

Such register must be open to the inspection of the Commissioners or their agents at all times. Every person, corporation, firm or agency conducting such business must, on or before January 20 of each year, make to the Commissioners an annual statement in the form of a trial balance of its books as of December 31 of the preceding year, which statement shall specify the different kinds of its liabilities and different kinds of its assets, together with the amount of each.

No Reports Submitted.

Not one of Washington's loan sharks has ever submitted any such statement or report, and the District officials are setting out to discover how come. The loan sharks will have to think up some clever alibis; their bulldozing, threatening attitude assumed toward delinquent borrowers will not get them very far in dealing with the District Attorney's office.

Persons engaged in making such loans, the law provides, shall furnish the borrower with a written statement at the time the loan is made, setting forth the amount of the loan, the date when loaned and when due, to whom the loan is made, the name of the lender, the amound of interest charged, and the lender shall give the borrower a plain and complete receipt for all payments made on account of the loan during the time such payments are made.

The act also provides that any employe of the Government shall forfeit his office upon violation of this act. Many governmental departments have in their employ persons who hold their jobs solely for the contacts they are able to make through which they lend money to their fellow employes at a flat charge of 20 per cent for any period between one pay day and the next.

The District Commissioners are authorized by the law to suspend or revoke the license provided by the act, either before or after conviction, whenever it is shown to their satisfaction that the act has been violated. The section also makes provisions for hearings relative to the granting and revocation of licenses.

Commissioners Enforce Act.

The Commissioners of the District are intrusted with the enforcement of the loan shark act and are authorized and empoyered to make all rules and regulations necessary in their judgment for the conduct of such business and the enforcement of the provisions of the act.

Thus it becomes obvious that the terror in which so many residents of the District have lived because of their dealings with loan sharks has been entirely unnecessary and has been created entirely by the loan sharks' policy of giving his victims what may be most effectively described as a "line of baloney" as to his supposed power over their lives.

The act, it might be added, does not apply to the legitimate business of national banks, licensed bankers, building and loan associations or real estate brokers as defined by the District Code. The loan sharks who lend money on real estate at usurious rates are not real estate brokers under the terms of the District Code, despite the fact that they display real estate brokers' licenses neatly framed on their walls by way of camouflage.

So much for the usurers' assumed but actually nonexistent power over his victims. Now a few words anent the loan sharks' plaintive squawk that they can not do busness profitably for less than 900 per cent per year.

For the past few days, The Post's reporter has been dropping in on the loan sharks at their offices to see what alibis, if any, they could advance for their illegal practices. Their tale of woe has been unanimously to the effect that even at the rate of $40 per $100 for 20 weeks, they are losing money.

Operating Costs of Lenders.

A nationally known expert on small loans, now engaged actively in that business, has compiled especially for The Post an actual statement of his institution's cost of making loans during the years 1929 and 1930, together with a summary of costs reported by other similar institutions throughout the United States.

This expert admits, incidentally, that his figures are high enough to be above criticism by any legitimate interests. He states that the average cost of making loans in Washington is 4.63 per cent per year, and that is in cases where the borrower is permitted a full year in which to repay his obligation. His company, it might be added, charges just a fraction less tha nthe 1 per cent monthly rate permitted by the loan shark act.

If the average cost per loan is only 4.63 per cent when the borrower has a full year in which to pay, how much less, then, must be the cost to the loan sharks whose turnover is two and a half times as frequent, whose money is outstanding only 20 weeks before it is entirely collected and ready to be loaned out again. Obviously, although no figures are available, it must be less than 4.63 per cent, if for no other reason than that the average loan shark has practically no overhead, employs not more than one low-salaried stenographer and one equally low-salaried collector, uses the cheapest junk furniture, and has his offices in tiny space in the cheapest office buildings.

And yet these loan sharks, whose total operating costs are not more than 4.63 per cent per year, attempt to justify themselves in demanding 900 to 1,000 per cent.

In this series tomorrow there will be revealed information not heretofore made public regarding new legislation to be introduced at the forthcoming session of Congress to strengthen the existing laws of the District covering money lenders.

TANKER IN CHANNEL GALE SENDS S O S

TUG HASTENS TO HELP

Paris, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—The Italian tank ship Tuscania wirelessed a call for aid in a heavy gale off the coast of Brittany today. Several other vessels, including the British steamship Temple Mead, also sent out calls for help.

Southwesterly gales, veering to the northwest, were sweeping the entire seaboard of Brittany from Cherburg to Lorient. Wireless stations were continually receiving appeals of distress from ships floundering in heavy seas between Cap Finisterre and the Lizard.

Besides the Tanker and the Temple Mead, the Greek steamer Stravonda and Dohodaka asked help. The seagoing tug LeTour Billon sailed from St. Nazaire to the assistance of the Dohodaka, reported sinking in latitude 47 north and longitude 6 west.

First wireless reports indicated that the Tuscania was the Cunarder which sailed from London today, but a later wireless identified the vessel as Italian.

Brest, France, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—The salvage tug Auroch put out from port late tonight in the face of heavy seas to assist the Italian tankship Tuscania.

The Tuscania was last reported to be four nautical miles northwest of Ushant Island. The gale, in which half a doen ships were floundering in distress, showed no signs of abating.

Hebrew Church Plans Memorial Services

A beautiful custom prevails among the Hebrew people of Washington. In Dr. Simon's flock they set aside one day in the year for memorial services for their dead, and on this day they make a pilgrimage to the cemetery and scatter flowers on the graves of those who have gone on to the last rest.

This service comes Sunday afternoon. It is always numerously attended and one of its beautiful features is the Silent Devotion that takes place in the temple as the Rabbi reads quietly the list of those for whom they mourn.

The Listening Post

By CARLISLE BARGERON

JUST now there is a tendency on the part of the rest of the country, particularly the highbrow portion of it, to look pityingly at Louisiana for having named the clownish Huey P. Long for the Senate in the place of the venerable Senator Ransdell.

Here was a high type of man whose whiskers added to a dignity that was already his, a man whose deportment and mien were above reproach.

He was something, too, that when the gallery visitors looked down upon the floor they had an inner feeling of satisfaction. He was a picture of what they had been led to believe statesmen were. He looked the part.

* * * *

NOW these same visitors returning after Huey has taken the seat may see a dazzling display of pajamas, or maybe he will be in his negligee. He has attended quite as august occasions as the United States Senate in such attire.

Huye's name in all probability will also race back to the Louisianans in glaring, spicy headlines. He will probably give the State a notoriety which it will not like at all.

It could have kept Mr. Ransdell here a hundred years without the slightest fear of embarrassment. Then why did it replace him with a clown?

WELL, here is one good thought: At the last session of the Senate this dignified, statesmanlike, scholarly man, seemingly of much learning, had a decision in economics to make.

There was the question of the tariff—whether he should vote for the bill with the Republicans or against it with his Democratic colleagues. It was not a decision long in the making. The sugar producers of his State wanted an increased levy on sugar.

So, to get this for them, Mr. Ransdell tied up with the Republicans from the first, voted for their every tariff item and then, on the final roll call, for the bill.

* * * *

ONE does not recall the individual increases. They ranged all the way from 10 to more than 100 per cent. He voted for a levy on cement, on bricks; he voted for a 50 per cent levy on this, a 25 per cent levy on that—hundreds of levies he voted. His was an essential vote to get them into the bill.

In return he received 24-100 of a cent on his sugar.

It may be that the Louisiana voters in their native backwardness were just overwhelmed by such learned bargaining as this. Maybe they decided they had better send a plain, unlearned man up here whose bargaining would be in more simple terms.

Church Council Hears Reports of Activities

At the regular monthly meeting of the church council of St. Paul's English Lutheran Church on Wednesday night reports of officers and committees indicated a condition of progress and prosperity in every line of activity that has not been equaled for years. A vigorous program was outlined for the ensuing fall and winter, reaching its climax in the completion and occupation of the first unit of the new church on Connecticut avenue next Easter.

The executive committee, which is composed of Dr. Snyder, chairman; L. Russell Alden, Henry C. Brunner, Harry T. Domer and Abner Y. Leech, jr., announced a list of committees to assume charge of the various departments of church work under the following chairmen: Building committee, Luther W. Linkins; finance, Harry T. Domer; nominating, Henry C. Brunner; auditing, William F. Dismer; property, Roger S. Drissel; music, Howard B. Homer; Muhlenburg memorial, Dr. Henry W. Snyder; ushers, Ferdinand Waldman; records, William F. Rhoads.

Church of Brethren Summons New Pastor

University Park Church of the Brethren has called the Rev. John Henry Cassaday, and he will be formally installed Sunday by members of the Ministerial and Mission Boards of Maryland. Dr. E. A. Bixler, president of the Blue Ridge College, will have charge of the installation service and will preach in the morning, followed by a short address from the new pastor, who will take up his duties at the evening service.

Mr. Cassaday was for twenty years connected with Juniata College, Huntingdon, Pa., and is therefore familiar with student life. He has also been pastor of two of the largest churches in his communion.

Maryland U. Head to Preach.

Dr. R. A. Pearson, president of the University of Maryland, will be in the pulpit of the First Baptist Church of Hyattsville Sunday morning at a special service to young people. The students of the university and of the Hyattsville schools will be guests on this occasion.

Women's League, Union Plan Service Together

A union service of the Women's League of Gettysburg College and of the Washington Missionary Union will be held next Wednesday at St. Mark's Lutheran Church, Eighth and B streets southwest. At 4:30 o'clock the Gettysburg League will hold its fall session, the subject for discussion being "Christian Education in the Home, Church and College." At 6 o'clock those in attendance will participate in a box supper. At 8 o'clock the fall session of the Missionary Union will be held. This will be featured by an illustrated lecture by Dr. R. L. Sexton, of this city, on "The Forgotten People of the Shenandoah."

The officers of the Washington Missionary Union are as follows: President, Mrs. J. G. Kingsbury; first vice president, Mrs. J. P. Krechting; second vice president, Miss Irene Gummell; third vice president, Mrs. C. Weitzel; recording secretary, Mrs. E. A. Seltzer; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Harry T. Domer, and treasurer, Mrs. William Pettis.

Negro Minister's Work Is Subject of Sermon

A few years ago a celebrated Negro minister at Richmond, named the Rev. John Jasper, set the world by the ears with a sermon he preached on the sun, in which he tilted a lance against the scientists by insisting that "it do move."

The Rev. J. L. S. Holloman, pastor of the Second Baptist Church, revives interest in the old man and his hobby tomorrow by making him the subject of a special sermon. He calls Brother Jasper "the Unique Ambassador of God."

Revivals Are Planned At Fifth Baptist Church

A series of revival meetings will begin at Fifth Baptist Church on October 20th, with Evangelist Carey Barker and party in charge. In the interim the pastor, the Rev. John E. Briggs, will break ground for it. Satan will be kept busy getting out of the way in the Southwest section for the next few weeks.

METHODIST PASTORS TO MEET IN CAPITAL

Bishop Beauchamp Will Lead Baltimore Conference Next Week.

WILL COMBINE BOARDS

Our great and interesting city, next week, will be filled with Methodist preachers, for the Baltimore conference of the Southern Church is going to meet at Mount Vernon Place Church Wednesday night. A new bishop of these parts, the Rev. Dr. W. B. Beauchamp, is to preside, and as he is something of a business bishop, the conference will move along with directed energy and interest.

Bishop Beauchamp came ahead of his conference and for the past three days has been meeting with his presiding elders and fixing up the appointments. This is something of an innovation—and a wise one, it would seem—for with that task out of the way, the bishop can enjoy his conference. If he puts off making the appointments until the daily sessions are being held, then all his time and energy are taken with that duty, and he can not mix with the brethren, listen to the bigwigs make their set speeches, or take part in the social life of the conference.

Another innovation is that the conference is its own host. It has raised the money for the entertainment of the ministers and lay delegates, and they will be entertained at the Hamilton Hotel. Should you see one truck after another loaded with apple pies and roast beef and corn pone and hog jowl and turnip greens, wending its way from Central Market to Fourteenth and K, know, brother, that the Methodists have come to town.

Not Best Method.

This is not the best way to entertain Methodist preachers, to be sure. The old-time way, of entertaining them in the homes, is the better way, but that is not possible in the city. As a child I used to go to annual conference with my father, who was a Methodist minister, and the one thing that impressed me was the amount of good food the ladies served three times a day. Such delicious stuffed and baked Tennessee hams, such big fried eggs—frog's eyes, we called them—such golden yellow butter, such yellow yams and brown corn pone and oyster plant, and a dozen other winter vegetables.

Of course, there was fried chicken galore. What would Methodism be without fried chicken? I think it can easily be demonstrated that it was fried chicken and not slavery that brought on the secession war. And if ever there was a Methodist preacher who didn't like every part of the chicken, including the feet and the neck, his character was arrested on general suspicion. I'm speaking, of course, of the Southern variety.

The Baltimore conference will have something else besides food to discuss. Some of the brethren want to change the time of holding the conference to June and some to April, and this issue will stir up a great debate. The question of finances and sending the children to school will enter largely into it; and, mirabile dictu, the Government has played hob with this matter, too. It has taxed the collection of taxes so that it upsets many a man's business. And most of us pay Uncle Sam before we do the Lord. We have to pay Uncle Sam, and we think the Lord can get along on nickles and dimes.

Will Combine Boards.

At the last general conference the Epworth League, the Board of Education and the Sunday School Boards were combined into one general board, and this now necessitates the annual conferences taking similar action. To this task the brethren will bend with reluctant feet, for they love to create offices rather than cut them down. Instead of three secretaries there will be one and I believe if Daniel C. Roper, chairman of the board of Mount Vernon Church, who once was Uncle Sam's tax gatherer, had his way about it, most of the boards would be abolished and the preachers all put to preaching.

Another, and a vastly more important matter, is the action to be taken on the action of the general conference in erecting a new board known as the general council, which will have supervision of the bishops and the work of the church during the interim of general conferences. The annual conferences must ratify this as it necessitates a change in the constitution.

There will be lots of good speaking and preaching in the afternoons and evenings to which the public is invited. Then Methodism is on dress parade, and it is a show that any good person will love to watch. If one of the old-time Gospel preachers is in the pulpit and he takes a text that was John Wesley's favorite: "Ye must be born again;" and shakes the brethren over the coals of fire a bit, you will hear some shouting and amening—not ah-mening—that will do your heart good. I have seen a whole conference in tears and jubilantly happy over one of these sermons preached by a simple old backwoods circuit rider. There is hardly such a preacher in the Baltimore conference.

Open-Air Rites Planned For Temple Heights

Open-air religious services will be held at Temple Heights at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, directed by the Rev. Dr. John C. Palmer, chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Masons. The Rev. Dr. John C. Palmer, pastor of Washington Heights Presbyterian Church, will deliver the address, and J. Walter Humphrey will direct the music.

Chevy Chase Church Plans Fall Dinner

The annual fall dinner of Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church will be held Wednesday evening, October 1. The women of this church entertained the Washington Presbytery last April and did it so well they made most of the members dissatisfied with their own home cooking. "Feed 'em well and hold 'em," is their motto.

Dr. Luther A. Weigle, at First Congregational Church.

A. F. Fox Has 78 Year Sunday School Mark

Noted Business Man Says Attendance Began When Six.

By DAVID RANKIN BARBEE.

Pastor Lenski's brag Sunday school pupil, for all of his 83 years and his remarkable record, which was chronicled on the church page last Saturday, must take a back seat, for Dr. Henry W. Snyder, pastor of St. Paul's English Lutheran Church, has a brag pupil who probably holds the national as well as the international attendance record.

In most circles in Washington Mr. Albert Frederick Fox is known as a remarkably successful business man. It is to be doubted if any man ever lived here with a better business record than his. No man ever questioned his integrity, no man ever doubted that he would account for every penny entrusted to his care, and so through the long years he has lived here—since 1863—many people have forced their affairs on him, many trusteeships have been given to him, and several great financial and fiduciary institutions have sprung up under his guidance and been managed in part or in whole by him, every one an outstanding success. Let me name some of the numerous enterprises on which he placed his mark:

A. F. Fox & Co., real estate dealers; Washington Loan & Trust Co., Equitable Building Association, Columbia National Bank, of which he was president 25 years; National Union Fire Insurance Co., of which he is now president.

Early in life he became a Mason, and for 23 years was grand chaplain of the Grand Lodge; and for 43, 27, and 13 years successively he was trustee of some branch of Masonry. When, at a Grand Lodge reception to him a few years ago, he surrendered its finances, paying over to his successor more than $600,000 in cash and securities, he was given such an ovation as probably was never accorded any other Mason, and when he tendered his resignation and said that he was too old to longer handle the funds, they refused to accept his resignation until they saw that they were dealing with an obdurate man who was not to be moved from his purpose.

"I never solicited any man's business," he said to me the other day, "and I never solicited any man's vote for any secular or church honor. Business has always poured in on me, often faster than I could take care of it."

At one time, when he was in the real estate business, he had 600 houses listed with his firm, and that would be a great rental business today.

Success Due to Religion.

It is not with the secular career of this good man that we are concerned at this time, but with his religious life. His business success, he says, was built entirely on his religious life. Not that he capitalized or commercialized the religious life at all. Such a thought naturally would be abhorrent to him; but he modestly says that his devotion to his religion gave the people confidence in his integrity and he saw to it that that confidence was justified by his devotion to his business.

Mr. Fox is now 84 years of age. He comes of good English and Dutch stock, having an English name and a Dutch body and the solid character of the Dutch. As he was born in York County, Pa., he would probably be called "Pennsylvania Dutch;" and to belong to that tribe is no mean distinction.

We should not gauge Pennsylvania by the tribe of politicians who have for so many years represented her in Washington. James Buchanan, in a letter to his niece, said that Pennsylvana Democrats are the best Democrats; and if you wish to see the best Democratic newspaper, you must read the Lancaster Democrat, which has been true to its colors for 125 years, never varying. Mr. Fox is that sort of a Democrat, and his Democracy is as stalwart as his Lutheranism.

Born on a farm, his very earliest recollection is going to Sunday school with his mother, who was a very religious character. On his father's farm and adjacent to it were three churches, one Dutch Reformed, one Evangelical and one Lutheran. No Methodist, or Baptist or Episcopalian or Catholic ever penetrated that community.

Could Hear Shouting.

"I recall very vividly," said he "how loud the Evangelicals could preach and pray and shout. When I was a child I would go to the farthest end of my father's farm, more than a mile from the three churches, and when the Evangelicals would hold their Sunday afternoon prayer service, I could hear them pray and shout that far off. The last time I was back home I asked one of my childhood companions if the Evangelicals could still pray as loud as they did before the Civil War, and she said 'Louder!'"

He laughed in his quiet way while telling this anecdote.

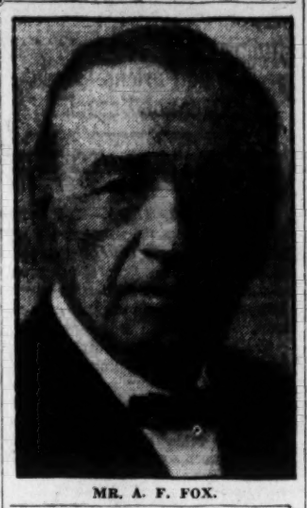
He Laughed in His Quiet Way While

It was the bedroom in the family home dedicated to the preachers, however, that made the deepest impression on his child mind. That room was in many thousands of homes in the North and all over the South, and without it the Gospel would have had as hard a road to travel as Jordan. The circuit riders and the country preachers could not have subsisted without it. Every minister of every denomination was welcome, so long as he was honest and decent and clean in his habits. In the Fox home the child saw Dunkers and Evangelicals and Lutherans and Presbyterian and Duth Reformed night after night sleeping in that sacred chamber, holding prayers by candle light, and blessing the hearty meals that were set out to cheer the parson while he rested from his weary labors. I make no doubt that the Fox home was like that of Mary and Martha at Bethany where Jesus so often retired when he wished to be at peace.

When he was six years of age his mother took him to Sunday School. This he fixes as the beginning of his career as a Sunday School scholar. And now for 78 years he has been going Sunday after Sunday to Sunday School, never missing a day when he is at home. For long continued service this probably is an unparalleled record.

Saw Antietam's Wounded.

His business career began when he was 16½ years of age. A friend of his family came from the town of York out to his father's farm and said he wanted young Alfred to clerk in his drugstore, and that was his first job. His going to York came right after the battle of Antietam, a battle in which Gen. McClellan took the badly whipped and disorganized Army of the Potomac and turned on Gen. Lee and struck him with such force that he drove that interpid commander back South across the Potomac. They say that McClellan was removed from command because he would not fight, but not even Gettysburg, according to the best-informed military historians, did so much for the Union as Antietam. That battle and McClellan's success in it, kept Emperor Napoleon III from recognizing the Confederacy, kept England from following France into that act, thwarted the diplomacy of Mason at



MR. A. F. FOX.

London and of Slidell at Paris, and in its political consequences actually sealed the doom of the South.

Gen. Lee's riflemen killed plenty of Yankees and wounded many more in that battle, for it was one of the bloodiest of the war, and this young Dutch boy went to his first job amid the procession of wounded and dying who were carried to York for medical treatment. That incident was not without its effect on his mind and character.

Within a year he got a call to Washington from another friend of the family, a real estate dealer named Kelly, whose widowed mother, Mr. Fox's father had cared for with her child on his farm. Bread cast upon the waters comes back buttered and covered all over with jam. Try it for yourself and see.

Delayed by Gettysburg.

It was his intention to come to Washington on July 1, 1863, but the battle of Gettysburg prevented that, and the Johnny Rebs had torn up the railroad track so that he had to take a circuitous buggy drive to catch a train. When his mother bid him good-by she said:

"Alfred, my boy, you have been a good son. When you get to that great wicked city, I want you to go to Sunday school."

He promised, though now in his old age he says that was not necessary, as he had been going to Sunday school so long the habit was fixed on him. While in York he boarded with a Presbyterian family and went to that Sunday school, though going to his own church. Always in these brag pupils you find somewhere that the touch of John Calvin and John Knox has left its impress on them. The best Roman Catholic I know anything about—layman, I mean—was once a Presbyterian elder.

No Dutch farmer ever sent his son off on such a journey alone and Pere Fox drove two days with his son and they talked about his prospects in Washington, but chiefly about the great battle of Gettysburg, whose cannon they had heard roaring for three days about them. And when the son came into Washington it was on a train filled with groaning soldiers who had been wounded in that battle. They were being brought to Washington to the hospitals here, and his first sight of this city was in the midst of war and its bloody carnage. He could not see the town for the hospitals, nor the people for the lamed and halt soldiers, who crowded the streets. This, too, made its impress on his character.

Met Dr. J. G. Butler.

Two days after he reached Washington he was called on to be a pallbearer in a funeral, and on going to the cemetery he found himself in the carriage with the minister, the celebrated Dr. J. G. Butler, then pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, at the corner of Eleventh and H streets.

"Who are you, my son?" asked the minister.

The boy told him.

"What church do you attend?"

"I have just come to the city, but I am going to attend the Lutheran Church," replied the boy.

"That's fine. Then you are coming to my church, and you will join my Bible class."

From that day to this Mr. Fox has been going to St. Paul's, and he has been a member of that Bible class to this day. In fact, he taught the class for more than 50 years, is now teacher emeritus, and the class bears his name.

Ten years after coming here he was made treasurer of the Sunday school, an office he still holds; and for 40 years he was treasurer of the church. This, too, is a record that can hardly be matched.

Great Events Witnessed.

Great events moved fast apace on his coming here. Within two years Lincoln was assassinated. Strange as it may sound to us in this day, Mr. Fox says news of that shocking crime was not known in the community generally until the next day; that there was no excitement that night over it, but the next day the feeling was so intense he never hopes again to see anything like it. The tribute paid to the martyr President, as he lay in state in the Capital, was a picture never to be effaced from his memory.

Then came the grand review of the Union Armies, which took two days of six hours marching to pass the reviewing stand. This, too, made a deep impression on his mind.

Dr. Butler's preaching did not at all please him. In his congregation he saw Andrew Johnson, then Vice President, and Schuyler Colfax, the Speaker of the House; Gen. O. O. Howard, the one-armed Christian soldier, who founded Howard University, and Gen. Eaton. These men always sat in the "amen corner." Gen. Eaton was a very tall man, and before services he came in early and would keep his eye on the doors. When his friends entered, he would rise to his full length and signal to the ushers to bring them up where the bigwigs sat.

"You didn't like Dr. Butler's sermons?" I asked.

"No, he was always denouncing the Democrats, calling them 'snakes in the grass,' and other pecullar and pet names that tickled the ears of the politicians and soldiers in his audience. That's why they came to hear him."

When Dr. Butler founded Luther Memorial Church Mr. Fox did not go with him. He says that act wrecked the old St. Paul's, but he stayed with the wreck and was loyal to the line of pastors who came after Dr. Butler.

He has very pronounced ideas about the pastorate. He thinks most of them stay too long in one pulpit, and that all should be changed oftener, for the good of the church and for the good of themselves.

It was not to be thought that a man of such deep piety and marked business ability would escape having ecclesiastical honors heaped on him, and so he has been a member of the church council 40 years, is now and long has been president of the congregation, has filled synodical offices on seminary and mission boards and has had to retire voluntarily from most of them because of his increasing age.

In every office, it is the testimony of Mr. Harry T. Domer, whose father succeeded Dr. Butler as pastor and who has known him for many, many years, and many others, Mr. Fox has given himself without stint to the task in hand. His labors have been labors of love and surely they have borne abundant fruit.

Tickets for Verses.

While the three of us were talking in Mr. Fox's office he referred with delicate tenderness to his long career in the Sunday school, which has been the one consuming passion of his life. "I had a quick memory," said he, "and when I was a child could memorize more verses than most children. They gave us tickets for reciting memory verses, and I recall now that one time the school at home ran out of blue tickets and the superintendent owed me 160 for reciting that many verses on one day."

Oh, those precious, those darling tickets! How many of us can remember them and how we worked for them and treasured them. The Sunday school began to go backward when the blue tickets began to disappear.

I could fill a newspaper page with the interesting reminiscences of this grand old man, but close with telling you what he said when I asked him, "If you had all the young men and young ladies of Washington before you now, what message would you give them"

"I would tell them, first, to go to Sunday school, and to work and teach in it. I know of no training school so good for the upbuilding of character. And, second, I would tell them to cling to the church. It is the only hope of our country and of our race."

SENTENCE SERMONS

By the REV. HAROLD E. BEATTY

(Pastor of Georgetown Lutheran Church).

THE MERCY SEAT.

WHY did that group of people of different nationalities, while tossed on a piece of timber from the broken Titanic during the solemn night watches, join the voices in "Our Father, Who art in heaven?"

Why did Washington kneel in the snow at Valley Forge and lift his hands and heart upward?

Why did the Man of Galilee, in the throes of Gethsemane, come to the throne with "Not My will, but Thine, be done?"

Why do "The glorious company of the apostles,
The goodly fellowship of the prophets,
The noble army of martyrs,

If I can touch a button and flood my room with light;

If I can lift the telephone receiver and hear my mother's voice in a distant State;

If I can turn the radio dial and listen to music in the islands of the sea;

And if there is no way to commune with the Infinite, then life is an enigma, the Bible a myth and Christianity a farce!

But look! look! There is a way.

Our Lord declares, "I am the Way, no man cometh to the Father but by Me."

Wherefore, along that way, by the guidance of the Holy Spirit, "let us come boldly unto the throne of grace" (Hebrews, iv:16), through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

CATHOLIC CHARITIES PARLEY IS PLANNED

National Group to Convene in Capital Beginning September 29.

WILBUR TO GIVE ADDRESS

First among the big religious meetings in this city this autumn is the Convention of Catholic Charities of the United States, on September 29. From reports that have reached headquarters here, it will surpass in attendance and in interest and in its programs any previous national convention of the society.

Every Catholic organization in the city is taking its part of the burden of preparing for the sessions of the convention, and at meetings held at the Willard Hotel representatives of these societies are coming together to help formulate plans to make reports on the work they have done.

Nothing is being overlooked for the comfort and convenience of the delegates. The nuns, of whom there will be over 250, will be cared for in the convents of the city, and where this is not possible homes will be opened to them. The lay and clerical delegates will be registered at hotels, though many of them will be guests of old friends here.

Dr. John O'Grady, secretary of Catholic Charities and director of the Bureau of Charities of the City of Washington, is the guiding spirit of the convention, and his energy and wise counsel are meeting every demand as it arises.

Secretary Wilbur will be the chief speaker at the opening meeting in the gymnasium of Catholic University; Secretary of Labor Davis will speak at the Willard Hotel meeting on Monday night; and the brilliant Jesuit priest, Father Corrigan, speaks at the same hotel on Tuesday. Solemn Pontifical High Mass will be celebrated at St. Patrick's on Sunday, October 5, at 11 o'clock.

One of the attractive features of the convention will be the ushers, who will be lovely young ladies from the senior class of Trinity College.

DR. LAMBETH GOING TO NEW PASTORATE

Dr. Shelton, of Emory, Will Replace Mount Vernon Place Minister.

CHURCH HAS PROSPERED

Down in North Carolina, at Thomasville, there is a chair factory that has been making chairs, and good chairs, for more than half a century. One of the owners of that factory, having inherited it along with his brothers from their father, is one of Washington's most popular ministers.

In his office at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church the other morning, this minister said to the chairman of his board:

"Mr. Roper, if I give the church just as good a mahogany chair as that one, can I carry it with me?"

Daniel C. Roper thought the minister meant the chair he had been using, the conventional revolving chair.

"I think so," he replied, with a typical South Carolina drawl. "But why do you want that chair?" pointing to the revolving chair.

His Trouble Chair.

"I don't want that chair, I want this chair," said the minister, stroking an arm chair. "This is the chair that woman sat in and told me all her troubles."

"What woman?"

"Why a million of them, every woman who comes to this church to talk with me sits in this chair and I have named it my 'trouble chair.' I would like to take it with me.'

This is a nice way to inform this community that Dr. W. A. Lambeth is leaving Mount Vernon Place Church at this conference. He does not know where he is going, but soon he will be on his way, carrying his "trouble chair" with him. Three cities are bidding for him, one a manufacturing town, in North Carolina; another a college town in Georgia, and the third a Tennessee city with one of the great historic Methodist churches

Here for Six Years.

Six years and eight months has Dr. Lambeth labored in this vineyard, and during that time he has received 2,558 new members into his church, dismissed by letter and otherwise, 1,155, showing a net gain of 1,403. When he came here, February 3, 1924, the church had a membership of 2,477; now its total enrollment is 3,880, making it the largest Protestant church here, if this honor does not belong to Calvary Baptist Church. In the South, there are but one or two Methodist churches with so large a membership. First Church, Houston, where Dr. Clovis C. Chappell, who was Dr. Lambeth's predecessor here, is now ministering to the lost sheep of Israel, and has a membership of 4,709. It may be that the Texans do not clean off their rolls, and that Mount Vernon tops the list.

So far as money gathered into the Lord's treasury is concerned, this church has, under Dr. Lambeth, paid in $431,800 during his pastorate. This church is not a rich church, but it seems to be a giving church, for $70,000 a year is a lot of money to give to benevolences and current expenses.

In addition to this, a debt of some $40,000 has been paid off and three buildings adjacent to the church bought, on which a modern Sunday school structure will rear its head.

Builder of Churches.

This record in figures would indicate, what is true, that Dr. Lambeth is a church builder; and in order to be that a man must be something of a power in his pulpit. Now that he is closing the books so far as Mount Vernon place is concerned, it is not unprofitable to see who he is.

A native of North Carolina, the son of a manufacturer, as we have seen, he was schooled at Trinity College, now Duke University, then at the theological schools of Vanderbilt, Yale and Harvard Universities. He has been preaching since 1905.

It would seem that he has been the favored child of fortune, so far as his ministerial assignments are concerned, for from the very beginning he has filled some of the most important pulpits in North Carolina before he came to Washington in 1924. Like most Methodist ministers, however, he had to serve his apprenticeship, for rare are the cases where a youngster leaves college or seminary and vaults immediately into a prominent pastorate. Hardly without an exception such a beginning has been but the end of the man, for even a soldier who, like Napoleon, is a genius, has to go through the starvation period of his training.

Many Attractive Qualities.

Never having heard him preach, having had no opportunity of studying the man from social contacts, I am not able to place a personal estimate on him, further than to say that he has, according to general repute, many attractive qualities of mind and heart. His brethren of other churches speak well of him, and that is something.

Dr. Lambeth is leaving here because of the inexorable rule of the Methodist itinerancy which never leaves a minister without a pulpit or a pulpit unsupplied. It is true that the so-called time limit has been removed, but that change has not worked well, and there is a growing sentiment to change back to the old law and move the preachers, willy nilly, at the end of four years. Presiding elders are required by law to so move, and they are but preachers after all.

Shelton to Succeed.

Dr. Lambeth will be succeeded by Dr. William Arthur Shelton, of the faculty of Emory University, Atlanta, Ga., who is one of the most learned scholars in the South. Orientalist, archeologist, authority on the Old Testament, he has spent most of his life in the schoolroom and in the Orient with a consecrated spade upturning the monuments of civilizations whose history is written in the Bible.

A native of California—this is good news for the California Society here, which is looking for new blood—Dr. Shelton was educated at a little college in Oklahoma, known as Hargrove College. Then he took his master's degree and his degree in divinity from Yale, and took six semesters of work at the University of Chicago.

After filling pastorates in Oklahoma for six years he became president of Oklahoma Wesleyan College 1911-14, and since the latter year has been professor of Old Testament and Semitic languages at Emory University.

Dr. Shelton is a thirty-second degree Mason, member of Kiwanis and Friars clubs, author of "Dust and Ashes of Empires," and has a wife and four children.

In every way, it seems, he will be an adition to the religious and cultural life of this comunity. The time has long past when any one can sneer at Methodist preachers for their illiteracy. A Phi Beta Kappa leaves here and a famous scientist takes his place.

DR. W. A. LAMBETH.

Church's Founder Will Be Honored

Bible Class Will Be Named After Dr. Butler, Is Vote of Men.

Dr. J. G. Butler, the founder of the Luther Place Memorial Church, is to be honored by having a Bible class in that church named for him. This was decided at a meeting of the men of the church at the parsonage Thursday night.

A board of teachers was named with Mr. Arthur T. Black at its head. Mr. Black is executive secretary of the Lutheran Laymen's Movement for Stewardship. He will be assisted by the following teaching staff: Mr. Paul F. Myers, Dr. Carson P. Frailey and Dr. William J. Showalter.

Dr. and Mrs. N. J. Gould Wickey have charge of the Monroe class for women, which has been functioning at high speed lately.

The Light Brigade and the Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society have been reorganized in line with the forward program of this church.

Dr. Rasmussen, the pastor, will take in another large group of members on October 5.

Bishop J. E. Freeman Returns From England

Bishop James E. Freeman has returned from England, where he had a successful visit, and will be in his pulpit at Washington Cathedral tomorrow afternoon at the evensong service, which will be broadcast over WMAL.

While abroad the bishop preached in a number of the famous English cathedrals and delivered addresses on several public occasions. The most notable of the latter was the Lord Mayor's dinner in London, at which he offered a toast. You'd never guess what it was: "The Cathedral."

Dr. Weigle Will Fill Pulpit of Dr. Pierce

Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, minister of First Congregational Church, is still absent on his vacation and his pulpit tomorrow will be filled by Dr. Luther A. Weigle, D. D., Ph. D., dean of Yale Divinity School, who will preach morning and evening.

Dr. Weigle is also a noted author, having several books on religious education to his credit. As he opens the big gate when he preaches, he will probably have a packed house to hear him.

New Church Founding To Be Held Tomorrow

A new denomination, to be known as "The New Testament Baptist Church," will be organized tomorrow by Dr. J. Milton Waldron, at a meeting to be held at the Twelfth Street Branch of the Y. M. C. A. It will work in cooperation with the People's Bible College and Missionary Training School, which is to be opened in this city in the middle of October.

This new church will start off with a revival. That is the way the Christian church originally began. It was a most interesting occasion, as is recorded in the Acts of the Apostles.

L. E. McGill to Speak At Union Mission Chapel

L. E. McGill, of Kendall Baptist Church, will be the speaker tomorrow night at the services in the Central Union Mission Chapel, 613 C street northwest. Special music will be furnished by Miss Annabel Sanford, violinist, and A. D. Todd, soloist.

Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo To Resume Pulpit

Presbyterian Cleric Will Appear at Service in Forenoon.

Tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, minister of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, will preach. This is Dr. Sizoo's first Sunday in Washington since late in June, when he left on a speaking tour of the West.

Dr. Sizoo filled all the engagements of the moderator of the general assembly in California, and also delivered a series of lectures at conference of ministers at Grove City, Pa.

In August Dr. Sizoo was the lecturer at the ministers' summer conference of the meeting of the Southern Presbyterian Church. He delivered two lectures a day during the week of the conference. He also delivered two lectures at the conference of ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Junluska, N. C. Junaluska, N. C.

There will be no evening service at the church until the first Sunday in October.

Services on Air Tomorrow

11 a. m.—(WOL) Service New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

11 a. m.—(WJSV) Service Fourth Presbyterian Church.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH SESSIONS ARRANGED

TO DEDICATE BUILDING

This is youth's day and generation, and in recognition of it youth will have a large place on the program of the international and world conventions of the Disciples of Christ, which will meet in this city on October 14 to October 23.

Mass assemblies of the delegates to the youth convention will be held at Luther Place Memorial Church, while the larger conventions of the elders are meeting at the Auditorium and the D. A. R. Constitutional Hall.

A thousand churches are expected to have young delegates at this convention, which will open on the afternoon of October 15 with addresses by Dr. Carl R. Rasmussen and Mr. R. R. Porter. Robert W. Burns, of Atlanta, Ga., will give the presidential address, after which the body will break up into units for the study of the different problems listed on its interesting programs.

A group of speakers, which includes some of the foremost men in the church in this and other countries, will be here to take part, but they will have to share time with the youth, whose party this will be.

One of the interesting ceremonies in which the youth of the convention will take part is the dedication of the new National City Christian Church at Thomas Circle on October 19. That same evening there will be vesper service at the National Church.

Church of Covenant Opens Sunday School

Plans for the resumption of the Sunday School activities of the Church of the Covenant on Sunday, September 28, are being drafted, and Col. Courtland Nixon, the superintendent, is preparing a program for the opening service. Dr. N. P. Patterson, the new associate pastor of the Church of the Covenant and the First Presbyterian Church, will participate in the program. Parents of very small children are asked to bring them to the church house, but to enter through the chapel, at 1764 N street, on the opening Sunday.

Missionary Program Arranged.

An all-day missionary program will be carried out tomorrow at the Full Gospel Tabernacle. Miss Mary Martin, the church's missionary to Africa, will speak at the morning service, and at 3 p. m. will be given a farewell reception.

COMMISSION DENIES CHANGES IN RULINGS

CHARGE DECLARED FALSE

The United States Civil Service Commission yesterday made an unequivocal denial that the ratings of prohibition agents have been changed as a result of political pressure.

The denial was made by Thomas E. Campbell, president of the Civil Service Commission, and was aimed at a statement made by Maj. Maurice Campbell, former prohibition administrator in New York, whose prohibition expose now is appearing in The Post.

The denial issued by President Campbell, of the Civil Service Commission, follows:

"The United States Civil Service Commission makes the unqualified statement that no rating of an applicant for the prohibition service or for any other classified civil service position has been made originally or changed because of political pressure or the insistence of any organization or individual. This statement is made in reply to the following paragraph in a syndicated article by Maj. Maurice Campbell, former prohibition administrator of the Eastern New York District, which was printed on September 19:

"'Political henchmen can pass civil service examinations. Nonpolitical appointees can be herded into political organizations after they get their jobs. The Civil Service Commission in Washington has been known to change it rating.'

Qualifications Only Consideration.

"The clear inference of this paragraph in Maj. Campbell's article coupled with the further text of the article, is that the Civil Service Commission has changed rating because of outside pressure.

"The Civil Service Commission says without reservation that in no case has a rating been assigned for any reason other than the evidence of qualifications for the office, gathered by the commission itself with the most painstaking care.

"The Civil Service Commission challenges Maj. Campbell, or anyone else, to produce evidence that it has assigned a rating not justified by the evidence of qualifications before the commission and gathered by the commission. The commission brands as false and vicious any statement made to the contrary."

GIRL FLIER FAILED TO RECEIVE DIVORCE

Irving, until they read about it in news dispatches following her death.

The girl was married to Alexander here July 8, 1926. They separated about two years ago and she went to California, where she took up flying.

The aviatrix will be buried at Irving, Kans.

San Diego, Calif., Sept. 19 (A.P.).—An inquest into the death of Ruth Alexander, killed in the crash of her airplane, will be held tomorrow morning, but Coroner S. C. Kelly said an investigation already had disproved a suicide theory.

It was believed possible by some investigators that Miss Alexander had deliberately driven her plane into a hill because of discovery of her supposedly bigamous marriage to Ensign Robert A. Elliott, U. S. N., her flying instructor.

After being divorced from Aldon Fanuelson, of Irving, Kans., in 1926, the flier wed Mac Alexander, another Kansan, in 1926. She married Ensign Elliott three months ago, apparently in the belief she had been divorced by Alexander.

The flier's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Blaney, of Irving, Kans., made plans today for simple funeral services at their home or in an Irving church. Funeral services here will be held tomorrow afternoon.

out of Philadelphia or picked it up along the route.

At least four of the gang were said to have remained in the old fortress-like structure. Information from the inside was meager and whether there was any more shooting after Frenelli's death could not immediately be ascertained.

When the prohibition officers entered the brewery, four of them captured three employes found in the boiler room, and Young and Finello started through the building for other prisoners. Young came back a few minutes later and was seized, striped of his gun and lined up with his men and the prisoners.

"There's Finello Let him have it."

Finello pointed his gun and pulled the trigger. The weapon jammed. One of the gangsters ducked behind Young, shoved his two hands through the chief's arm slots and fired. Finello dropped.

The gunmen, blazing away as they left, escaped in an automobile. Their shots drew hundreds of persons to the old brewery. The curious milled about the streets, but finally were herded by police.

A bullet tonight grazed the neck of Police Detective George Craig, who with Detective Manfredi was investigating the killing of Finello.

The shot, fired from an unknown source, struck the detective while he was on the second floor of the brewery. He was not seriously wounded.

TUTTLE LAX IN PROSECUTION OF RUM CASES, SAYS CAMPBELL

United States attorneys than in any other district in the country, yet with all this machinery there were tried in the Federal courts of this district in 1929 only 39 prohibition cases.

Police Provide Cases.

Of these 39 trials, 22 were cases made by the police. During the same year, 1929, my office filed with Mr. Tuttle for prosecution considerably more than 1,000 cases, and the local police filed considerably more than that.

For wet New York's police—believe it or not—do make prohibition arrests. During the fifteen months from July 1, 1927, to October 4, 1928, the records of my office show that while my men (operating mainly against bootleggers' sources of supply) made a total of 1,860 prohibition cases in New York City the police (dealing mainly with speakeasies) made 8,750 prohibition cases.

In 1928 I found that no method had been set up whereby I could ascertain the disposition of the many cases in Mr. Tuttle's office so I decided to put a questionnaire to my entire personnel. About October 1, 1928, I asked each agent:

"Since July 1, 1927, have you ever testified as a witness before a jury in any Federal court in the Southern District of New York."

The replies showed that out of the entire force, approximately 200 men, only seven had been asked to testify in any criminal trial during the fifteen months in which they had made 1,860 cases. Three of these agents had testified in a single case; so the actual trials during the fifteen months were practically four.

The record shows that at present Mr. Tuttle's office has on file about 5,000 untried prohibition cases some of which date back a number of years. Occasionally these older cases is brought to trial, but many of them have been dismissed because, in the long delay, the witnesses have been lost. In many instances the Government agents who made the case have left the service.

Tuttle Is "Swamped."

Especially because of the fact that there is no State enforcement act, and all police cases are put into the Federal courts, Mr. Tuttle is well nigh swamped. I appreciate fully the difficulties of prosecuting prohibition cases in New York. Mr. Tuttle's excuse to me for lack of prosecution was the insufficient number of Federal judges; but since several additional judges have been authorized and appointed, it would appear that this excuse has been removed.

The fact is that the difficulties are in no way comparable to the near paralysis that has engulfed the prohibition law as a criminal statute in this district.

Virtually the entire energy of Mr. Tuttle's office, in prohibition cases is expended to obtain pleas of guilty from defendants on a compromise basis. Of course all these compromise cases are put down as convictions. But a criminal statute against profitable bootlegging certainly has little deterrent effect when pleas of guilty are accepted on agreement that only small fines will be imposed.

Mr. Tuttle has set up in his office to prosecute prohibition cases a separate unit which is in charge of an assistant, Robert B. Watts, who has under him ten or twelve other assistant United States attorneys handling prohibition cases exclusively. In addition to this, there was, during my term, a small clerical force supplied by the Department of Justice and an additional force of 22 persons consisting of attorneys and clerks furnished by the Prohibition Bureau and paid out of the appropriation allotted to the prohibition administrator.

Checks Up on Men.

These salaries of the prohibition employes assigned to Mr. Tuttle's office aggregate about $35,000 a year. I know of no other United States attorney's office where such a condition exists.

In 1928 I tried to keep track of what these Prohibition Bureau employes, my subordinates, were doing in Tuttle's office. I learned that a Prohibition Bureau attorney, Mr. Taggart, had been assigned by Mr. Watts to review prohibition cases and make recommendation as to prosecution. I asked him to inform me just what recommendation he was making.

"In cases in which some question of law might hold the matter up because of a dispute between the defendant's counsel and the Government, and other weak cases," Taggart reported by memorandum, October 31, 1928, "I am writing to the defendants requesting them to appear in my office and at the same time they appear I tell them they had better pay a fine and plead guilty."

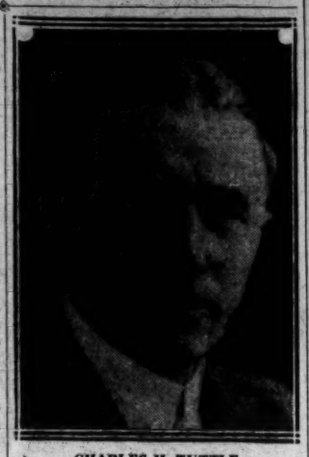
In a case of a defendant charged with transporting 21½ barrels of beer, I find that Mr. Taggart recommended as follows:

"In response to my letter, Attorney Schriber appeared in this office and he has agreed to plead the defendant guilty if a $25 fine is recommended, provided no action is taken against the vehicle."

His Authority Curbed.

If this sort of farce were to be conducted, it was clearly in the province of the prosecutor and not of the Prohibition Bureau. I protested to Tuttle against Taggart's being used for such work. Subsequently I was instructed by the commissioner of prohibition that in future I would have no jurisdiction over the Prohibition Bureau employes in Tuttle's office. So, though their salaries came out of my budget, I was not permitted to know what they were doing or why they were needed in the United States attorney's office.

For a long time it was the custom in the southern district to hold "bargain days" for prohibition offenders on Mondays of each week, when defendants were invited to plead guilty, with a predetermined fine of $10. I have never seen in a magistrate's or police courts anything to equal the disgraceful exhibition this procedure created in the Federal courts.



CHARLES H. TUTTLE,
United States attorney in charge of prohibition prosecutions in the Southern District of New York.

On one of these "bargain days" I happened to be in the courtroom, and the Federal judge then sitting motioned for me to come up to his bench, and I sat there an hour or so while the exhibition was on. He told me he had refused to sit on this particular day unless it were agreed that the fine should be raised to $25.

"Anyway," he said, "if I were one of these defendants I would never plead guilty, because if they do not plead guilty they will be held for trial, and there will never be any trial, so their cases will be forgotten.

Recognized Old Faces.

This Federal judge also told me that it had been his experience that the assistant United States attorney never made any attempt to bring to the notice of the court the fact that any defendant was a second or third offender, and he added:

"I am sure I recognized some of the faces as individuals who have been here before."

This was not the only Federal judge who expressed himself as disgusted with these bargain days, and in consequence they were finally discontinued.

The only merit of this procedure was that it permitted the United States attorney to count each pleading and fine imposed as a conviction, and in consequence his percentage of convictions and amount of money collected in fines made him appear in his reports to the Department of Justice as one of the most vigorous and efficient prosecutors in the United States.

When the bargain days were discontinued Mr. Tuttle adopted the procedure of filing an information against offenders, but this only resulted in congesting the calendar because few cases were brought to trial. The calendars are repeatedly read in court in the hope that some of the offenders will come forward and plead guilty.

When I complained about compromise pleas to Mr. Tuttle he always defended himself by saying that he could not prevent anybody from pleading guilty. This unquestionably is a fact, but it has nothing to do with the plea of guilty entered because of a previous arrangement that a modest fine would be imposed and no jail sentence would be recommended.

Recalls Garage Case.

A case vivid in memory is that of the Woodin garage, an illegal cold water brewery in the Bronx, one of the largest I have ever seen, costing probably $100,000 to install. The agents had made a beautiful case against this major violation, but the case dragged on for considerably more than a year, although I repeatedly requested prosecution. Finally, in the fall of 1929, the investigators were notified to appear in court to testify. Naturally I thought the case was about to be prosecuted.

Instead, the agents had been called to testify in the libel proceedings against the property It developed that, without any notification to my office, the Woodin garage case had been compromised some six months previously with pleas of guilty by the defendants, including the proprietor and three of the principals had been fined. Two paid $100 and the other $25.

In the case of Max Himmel et al, nine or ten defendants were charged with conspiracy in the traffic of liquor in large quantities. Assistant United States Attorney U. S. Grant handled the case, and one day I heard that the defendants were going to plead guilty so I went to court to hear the sentencing.

Mr. Cashin, defense attorney, made a plea for leniency, extolling the virtues of the defendants, saying they should not be severely punished for violating a law which was disregarded by nearly every citizen in New York.

Mr. Grant stood by silently while the defense attorney expatiated on the white reputations of the defendants. The sentence was the imposition of some modest fines.

I could cite innumerable important cases that have never been brought to trial. At Mr. Tuttle's suggestion, I once furnished him a list of 60 cases involving major violations that were pending and had been pending for a year or more in the office.

5,000 Cases Now Pending.

The calendar congestion became so great after the abolition of the "bargain days" that it soon became apparent something would have to be done to relieve the situation. In this extremity the United States commissioners—who are comparable to police court magistrates—were called upon to use their discretion and dismiss many prohibition cases, particularly those made by the police. This procedure was put into effect last fall, and the records of the hearings before Commissoners Cotter and O'Neill are interesting. September 17, 1929, there were 79 cases dismissed out of 141 heard; September 25, 64 dismissed out of 115 cases; October 1, 61 out of 106 cases dismissed; October 4, 82 out of 151 cases dismissed; October 16, 41 cases out of 75 dismissed; October 17, 33 dismissed out of 53; October 22, 62 cases dismissed out of 104.

Evidently it was decided that continuance of this procedure would be subject to severe criticism, for shortly thereafter it was discontinued and the filing of information again was substituted. Immediately the calendar began to climb, until now there are 5,000 prohibiton cases pending.

The only time while I was administrator in New York that I ever received what I consider adequate prosecution was in the cases of the night clubs raided in June, 1928, when Mrs. Willebrandt detailed three assistants from Washington.

In the next few articles I will tell how the prosecutions were handled in some of the famous cases in New York.

LEAGUE VOTES NEW ARMS PARLEY FUND

CUBA IS FIRM ON COURT

Geneva, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—The budget committee of the League of Nations assembly today voted 300,000 gold francs (about $57,000) for the expenses of a general disarmament conference next year.

This action was accompanied by declarations from the representatives of various powers, urging speed in the league disarmament program and insisting that a world conference to effect genuine reduction of land-sea-air forces be convened in 1931.

Meanwhile it was understood in informed quarters that the Italo-French naval negotiations—the success of which is regarded as essential to the fruition of a general arms treaty—continued to be in a state approximating stagnation. The more optimistic league leaders are hoping that some concrete progress will be made between France and Italy before the prparatory disarmament commission meets November 3.

Britain Urges Vote.

When authoritative persons are asked what the preparatory commission can accomplish in November unless the French and Italians do arrive at some agreement, the answer is:

"We do not know, it is difficult to see what progress the commission can make, lacking a Franco-Italian agreement."

The voting of the money for the proposed arms conference was urged by the British government through its representative, Hugh Dalton, undersecretary for foreign affairs.

He said Great Britian regarded it as essential that the sum be voted and quoted authorities to show that armament expenditures over the world for one year are 600 times as great as the entire budget of the league. Mr. Dalton also suggested that true economy would lay in trimming armament rather than in being parsimonious with expenditures for disarmament negotiations.

Cuba's opposition to the putting into force the protocol for revision of the World Court statute agitated the assembly again today.

Cuba Stands Pat.

The British delegate, Professor Noel Baker, warned the committee dealing with this matter that the holding up of the protocol would jeopardize the chances of the United States entering the World Court. (The protocol contains a provision which American officials see as guaranteeing the Root reservations, which specify the league must not ask for a World Court opinion on anything affecting American interests unless the United States is informed and approves).

Professor Baker and others sought to bring about the withdrawal of Cuban objections but tonight their pleas seemed in vain. It was explained informally that Cuban sentiment was aroused yesterday by the heated words between Nicolas Politis, Greek delegate, and Orestes Ferrara, Cuban ambassador at Washington, which he made it more difficult for the Cuban delegation to change its position.

South Nashville Bank Bandits Steal $3,000

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 19 (A.P.).—Two bandits held up the manager of the south Nashville branch of the Fourth and First National Bank today and escaped with currency estimated to have totaled $3,000.

L. M. Wood, a bank official, said that the men, one dressed as a taxicab driver, entered and asked for change for a dollar. After he complied with their request, one of the men drew a gun and kept Wood covered while the other took all money in sight. They escaped in a stolen taxicab.

Charred Parts of Body Of Missing Girl Found

Roseau, Minn., Sept. 19 (A.P.).—Charred parts of the body of Anna Wold, 25, who disappeared August 24, have been found in a burned strawstack, county officers said today. They said the girl, an expectant mother, had been slain.

Carl Brandevold, 30, owner of the farm is held, but he denied any knowledge of the crime. The girl's skull and one leg were found in the burned straw, while the torso had been partly plowed under in the field. Her coat and beads were also found on the farm.

Man Falls 11 Stories To Death in New York

New York, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—Arthur B. Herpolsheimer, 30 years old, of Grand Rapids, Mich., said to be prominent socially there, was killed today when he fell or jumped from an eleventh-floor window of the Hotel White, Thirty-seventh street and Lexington avenue.

The body will be removed to Grand Rapids today.

Ohio Man Shoots Two, Then Slays Wife, Self

Wooster, Ohio, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—After shooting and severely wounding two men, Earl Young, 40, today shot and killed his wife, Isa, 45, and then fatally wounded himself, police reported.

The two men who were shot while filling a silo on the farm of Young's father at Morland, are Carl McClugage, 20, and Ed Uhl, 60. Young shot his wife and himself at their home in Jefferson, several miles away. He was believed mentally unbalanced.

Men Kill Each Other Over Orphan Children

Chillicothe, Tex., Sept. 19 (A.P.).—Quarreling over the disposition of six orphaned children, two men shot each other to death in a cotton field near here.

J. H. Carter, of Gorman, and Oscar Ford, said to be an itinerant cotton picker, were the victims. Officers were able to learn little about the fight except that Carter had gone to the field to demand that six orphaned children, nieces and nephews of the men, be placed in an orphans' home.

Filling Station Robbers Are Shot by Manager

Los Angeles, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—Forced by two robbers to lie on the floor of his filling station, L. G. Whaley got up shooting last night.

Police today were summoned to an apartment house on Sunset Boulevard and found Stanley Walsh, 22, recently from Chicago, and Bernard Standemeyer, 20, critically wounded. They confessed the hold-up, police said. Walsh probably will die, while Standemeyer has an even chance to live. The $20 the pair took from Whaley was recovered.

Home of Contractor Bombed by Racketeers

Kenosha, Wis., Sept. 19 (A.P.).—A by Chicago racketeers, today damaged the home of Markus Thompson, paving and sewer contractor, who held several contracts in northern Illinois. The bomb was exploded in an outside drain pipe. A corner of the house was torn open. Mrs. Thompson and her four children were not hurt.

Thompson told the police he had been visited by two strangers, who demanded money, which he refused. Neighbors, awakened as the blast shattered windows in their homes, saw a car leave the Thompson home.

SOVIET SELLS WHEAT SHORT IN TRADE PIT

there is an implied power to rescind the license for failure to check manipulation. It was disclosed that the Attorney General has never passed on the question and thus far no opinion from him has been requested. For the time being Secretary Hyde is depending upon cooperation of the Chicago Board of Trade, which has shown a decided disposition to prevent cornering or outright price manipulation in trading in grain futures.

Although the extent of the Russian grain trading has been small, when it is realized that the turnover on the Chicago market reaches an annual total of 16,000,000,000 bushels, it was pointed out, that factor in the dealing is the important thing. Had an organization of American farmers or a number of small traders sold short to the extent of 5,000,000 or even 15,000,000 bushels the price reaction might not have been pronounced.

Head of Trade Board Knows 'Nothing Definite'

Chicago, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—John A. Bunnell, president of the Chicago Board of Trade, said tonight that "there has been some talk going around for two or three weeks" concerning Soviet trading in the Chicago wheat pit.

Mr. Bunnell had been asked to comment on a Washington dispatch that Secretary of Agriculture Hyde had wired him that an inquiry "had revealed beyond all question of doubt the heavy short selling of wheat" by the Russian government. Mr. Bunnell said that he had left his office before the telegram arrived.

"However, there has been nothing definite," he said, "about the Russian activity and I know nothing more than that."

Market experts said that "heavy short selling" here by the Soviets would have a tendency to depress the price of wheat, which has already occurred.

WORLD COURT ISSUE IN SENATE DELAYED

Cuba's Refusal to Ratify Protocol for Revision Halts Program.

G. O. P. LEADERS SPLIT

(Associated Press.)

Another delay in the impending Senate contest over adherence of America to the World Court seemed likely last night as a result of the unexpected refusal of Cuba to join other members of the League of Nations in ratifying the protocol for revision of the court statute.

The protocol of revision was framed to meet reservations demanded by the Senate as a condition of American adherence. These Senate reservations never had been agreed to by the other nations and the revision was drafted as a meeting ground between this country and the other powers. Senate ratification of the revised protocol is necessary.

President Hoover, in the face of opposition from some of the leaders of his party in the Senate, has approved the protocol of revision, agreeing with Secretary Stimson that the ends sought by the Senate's reservations were met by the new protocol.

Issue May Be Delayed.

However, he deferred sending the protocol to the Senate for its ratification at the last session to await formal approval of it by the other nations. Since Cuba has not ratified, it is believed the President may not send the World Court issue to the Senate at the short session, beginning in December, unless that country ratifies in the meantime.

Whether or not Mr. Hoover injects the World Court contest into the short session, leaders of the opposition are confident of either defeating American adherence or of delaying action.

Failure of Cuba to act may forestall an embarrassing situation for President Hoover. On the question of adherence to the world court, Republicans in the Senate are sharply divided. Senator Watson, of Indiana, party leader and spokesman of Mr. Hoover, is one of the most outspoken foes of American adherence to the court. Chairman Borah, of the foreign relations committee, and Senators Johnson, of California, and Moses, of New Hampshire, ranking Republicans on the foreign relations committee, are other opponents.

27 Have Signed Protocol.

So far 27 of the world powers have signed the protocol of revision of the world court statutes. Only 22 signed the protocol of accession of the United States embodying the Senate reservations.

When other countries declined to accept the Senate's reservation stipulating that the court should not render without the consent of this government any advisory opinion in which America has, or claims to have, an interest it was believed here that the question of adherence to the court by the United States was ended.

Then Elihu Root, a noted jurist, with other international lawyers, last summer joined in drafting the court statutes in an attempt to reconcile the differences.

State Department officials said yesterday there have been no communications between the American and Cuban governments regarding Cuba's attitude.

Dr. J. R. Taylor Named Trustee of Seminary

At the recent meeting of the Synod of Virginia of the Southern Presbyterian Church, Dr. James H. Taylor, pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church, was elected a Trustee of Union Theological Seminary. This is one of the oldest seminaries in the country.

Formerly the seminary was located at Hampden-Sidney, Va., where the Southern Presbyterians maintained a college. About 25 years ago it was moved to Richmond, Va., and located at Ginter Park, where extensive grounds had been given. Near the Seminary is the General Assembly's Training School for Lay Workers, which trains missionaries for the Home and Foreign field and for executive and administrative work in the churches.

CANADA'S TARIFF.

An effort is made to convince the American public that Canada in enacting a new tariff law is retaliating against the Smoot-Hawley law of the United States; that Canada is in fact beginning a tariff war which will work great injury to American industry, agriculture and labor.

This allegation is palpably a political invention, designed to give advantage to antiprotection and anti-Hoover candidates in the November election. There is no proof whatever that Canada has run amuck in tariff matters, or that she courts a suicidal commercial war with the United States.

There is abundant proof, however, that the new Canadian government is doing everything in its power to relieve the unemployment situation, by developing home industry. No fair-minded American can find fault with Canada for trying to make conditions better by means of tariff readjustment. Canada's growth and prosperity will promote the prosperity of the United States. Far-sighted Americans perceive that a more populous northern neighbor will be a greater consumer of American commodities, whatever the tariff rates may be on either side of the border.

After American independence had been won, and before the Constitution had welded the States together, it was Great Britain's policy to cripple American commerce in every way possible. The United States at that time consumed three-fourths of Britain's exports of manufactured goods, but Britain was not satisfied, and endeavored to monopolize shipping, to exclude the United States from the West Indies, and to prevent the growth of American industry. The result was not only failure but an impairment of good relations that nearly provoked war. The subsequent growth of the United States developed a vast trade with Great Britain which continues to this day, to the advantage of both countries.

The United States would be foolish indeed to attempt to prevent the growth of Canada, by tariff laws or otherwise. Canada can not be prevented from becoming a rich and populous country. Its keenly intelligent population and its varied natural resources make its expansion certain. The day when it can count 50,000,000 population will be a happy day for the United States, for it will mark an immense exchange of commerce between the two countries and reinforce the stability of free government throughout the world.

Canada's right to impose protective duties according to her own best interests can never be honestly challenged by Americans who cherish friendship with that country. The selfish Little Englanders who are finding fault with Canada for exercising home rule in tariff matters should have no imitators in the United States. The protective tariff policy that has made the United States powerful is now being adopted by many other countries, and must become universal. How the British Empire will reconcile dominion protection with imperial free trade is not a problem that the United States is called upon to solve. But it is apparent to all thinking Americans that Canada is on the right track when she establishes protective duties for her own benefit, even as against other parts of the British Empire.

SAFETY OF SCHOOL CHILDREN.

With the opening of the public schools on Monday the responsibility of local motorists for the safety of children increases. During the summer children are not concentrated on the streets as they are four times daily during the school year. Morning, noon and mid-afternoon will witness congregations of thousands of Washington children on the streets. They will be preoccupied with thoughts of play, as children always are, and automobile drivers must take extraordinary precautions against accidents.

The schoolboy traffic patrol will function again this year. A detail of police has been assigned to organize the patrol and instruct classes of children in safety matters. The patrol and the educational work will do much to save life. In connection with the schoolboy patrol it is the motorists' duty to realize that these boys, although they have no police power, are true public servants. Their hands raised against oncoming automobiles mean "stop." Their traffic signals should be obeyed wholeheartedly. It is their duty to protect younger children in crossing the streets. The patrols have proved in the last two years an unselfish devotion to this task.

Motorists who disobey the boy traffic patrols are running a great risk of endangering the safety of little children. If these drivers can be brought to realize the necessity for heeding the direction of the boy patrolmen, and if Washingtonians generally will realize their individual responsibility for the safety of school children, the coming school year will witness a decrease in accidents involving Washington's child population.

BROOKHART'S NEW PARTY.

Senator Brookhart is not accustomed to holding his tongue while prohibition is being discussed, but very little has been heard from him on the issue since he told the world about the "wet Wall street dinner" he attended in Washington. Now amid the orgy of wet and dry statements he feels constrained to point the way whereby the advocates of repeal can be put in their place.

This new force to fight wet Wall street is to be mobilized in the South and the West. Senator Brookhart has not decided whether the crusade should be undertaken by one of the existing major parties, or whether a new party should be organized for the purpose. But in view of the senator's peculiar genius for initiating political movements, it may be taken for granted that his leanings are in the latter direction. Apparently he is dreaming of a supercoalition that would make the moneyed interests bow to the humble, water-drinking farmer. To accomplish this he would unite the West and the South under a common political banner and would strike terror in the heart of the bibulous and wealthy East.

The senator does not explain how he is going to harmonize the dominant Republican sentiment of the West with the Democratic convictions of the South. Nor does he elucidate his methods for converting the rabid wets who infest his so-called Progressive group. He does not attempt to justify his appeal to sectionalism, feeling, no doubt, that explanation of a scheme so nebulous would be supererogation. His willingness to desert the Republican party in the hope of fathering a new political hybrid needs, of course, no elaboration.

One gathers the impression that the Iowan has kept his own counsel on this issue about as long as could be expected, and that the multiplicity of wet and dry gabble from other quarters inspired within him this ingenuous formula for slaying the serpent rum and the bogey Wall street with one blow.

THE HOMING PIGEON.

To the ever-growing list of objects and domestic creatures made obsolete by the advance of civilization the carrier pigeon is now added. The bird is closing his account with many brilliant feats and an endless flair of romance to his credit.

The Navy has virtually abolished its homing pigeon service and the Army has reduced its number of birds to 700, most of which are located at the Camp Mammoth training station in New Jersey. Radio has been developed to such an extent that the birds will no longer be needed, except for supplemental service when all wire and wireless mediums of communication fail.

During the World War the homing pigeon played a noble part. That famous bird, Cher Ami, now mounted in the Smithsonian Institution, delivered 12 important messages from the Verdun front, returning on his last trip with a leg shot away and a bullet in his breast. Ninety per cent of the messages entrusted to these birds by the Signal Corps were delivered, in spite of the deadly fire trained on them from the trenches. Several pigeons were awarded the Croix de Guerre and the Legion of Honor.

Commercial use of the homing pigeon's unerring instinct has virtually ended. Now that he is to be superseded on the battle front by radio and telephone, what will become of this friend of man? Apparently his chapter of usefulness is written, and there is nothing left to do but erect a monument to the bird's memory, as did the Utah pioneers in memory of the sea gull which is credited with saving the first settlers from the starvation that was threatened by a grasshopper invasion.

CHICAGO'S FAKE MAN HUNT.

Chicago has inaugurated a man hunt of major proportions. The city's crime commission has proscribed 26 gangsters and racketeers. Judge Lyle has issued warrants for their arrest, and 6,000 policemen have been instructed to "bring them in."

This is Chicago's answer to Al Capone's challenge. When the notorious "scarfaced" gangster presented himself at police headquarters a few months ago, just after he had been released from a Philadelphia jail, officials scratched their heads and decided that they didn't "want" him. Having cleared himself by this brazen maneuver, Capone took a vacation, returned to Chicago and attempted to unite all the gangs of the city into one gigantic crime cooperative. Officials are apparently at a loss to know what to do about it, so they have made up a list of "public enemies" and started a drive against them.

Curiously enough, this campaign to salvage Chicago's reputation is based on a statute enacted in 1874. The gang leaders are to be rounded up as vagrants, held on $10,000 bonds and sentenced to six months of hard labor. Modern law is inadequate to deal with these supercriminals. They deserve the slap on the wrist prescribed for the bad man of 50 years ago. Fortunately research into the legal archives has brought Chicago a new weapon to drive the naughty playboys out of the city.

It is needless to say that the public will be more interested in this "war" on crime when the suave Capone has been on the handle of a pick or shovel for a few months. Chicago has given vent to her wrath. The crime commission wishes it understood that the fair name of the Windy City can not be besmirched with impunity. The public has seen this smoke before, and looked in vain for the fire. The scoundrels who "live lives of crime and disgrace Chicago in the eyes of the world" have been immolated on the scaffold of publicity. Surely they will rush to hide their disgrace in prison cells or leave their old haunts forever.

END OF CHINESE WAR SEASON.

China's rebellion appears to be broken as the result of the resignation of Gen. Yen Hsi-Shan, chairman of the Peiping government and leader of the rebel armies. Yen's withdrawal leaves his ally, Feng Yu-Hsiang, in the field, but Yen was the brains of the northern government and it may be doubted that Feng will be able to carry through a civil war unsupported. The collapse of Peiping marks the end of a movement that long has threatened Chiang Kai-Shek's nationalist government. Yen Hsi-Shan and Feng Yu-Hsiang pooled their resources in opposition to Chiang Kai-Shek, asserting that he was a dictator and alleging that corruption was rampant in the Nanking government, and during the summer the march of their armies southward seriously threatened the stability of the Nanking government. Of recent weeks, however, Chiang Kai-Shek gained the upper hand. Recently he announced that the campaign against the rebels would be continued through the winter and that an army of 150,000 men would be sent into rebel territory.

Yen Hsi-Shan may have been influenced in his decision to resign by the knowledge that his cause was lost. It is more likely, however, that closing the rebel campaign at this time is a bit of typical Chinese strategy. In this event Nanking's troubles are not over by any means.

Chinese wars are usually fought in the summer months. During the winter the war lords' armies are generally withdrawn and usually disbanded, not only because it is difficult to campaign in the dead of winter in China, but also because the war chests are not usually well enough filled to permit of supplying an army in the season when it is necessary to purchase its sustenance instead of drawing it from the countryside. Normally, however, the Chinese wars are resumed with the breaking of spring. The country may be suffering from famine and whole villages may face the prospect of starvation unless their men spend the summer in the rice fields, but the prospect of military action accompanied with a promise of plenty to eat that only the chief of a raiding army can give in China is compelling and the rebel army forms over night.

Yen Hsi-Shan has withdrawn from the Peiping government and presumably has disbanded his armies. He will withdraw in seclusion if he plays a typically Chinese game. But when winter spends its fury it would not be surprising if Yen Hsi-Shan should renew his feud against the nationalist government. He will be in a position in the spring to resume the campaign at the point where it was inaugurated last April.

A Virginia legislator has been arrested on a charge of embezzling funds from an orphanage. Apparently it is unlawful for politicians to steal in Virginia.

RED PROPAGANDA

From the Christian Science Monitor.

From two widely separated points of the world compass come simultaneous reports of new revolutionary machinations on the part of agents of the Third Internationale. In Cairo the Egyptian government, for the fourth time since 1928, has arrested individuals sent into the country to recruit pupils for the College of Communist Propaganda in Moscow with the end in view of creating, in Egypt, a center of bolshevist propaganda. At the same time a police raid on a Communist gathering place in Shanghai disclosed documents, identical with orders recently intercepted in central China, which indicate that the weight of Moscow's authority is back of the stubborn efforts of Chinese Communists to recapture the City of Changsha. Both Egypt and China are regarded, among revolutionists, as likely fields for Communist advance, and both, accordingly, are being assiduously cultivated.

The next twelve-month period, however, is likely to bring more such disclosures. The present world-wide economic depression is made to order for the propagandist of communism. He is trained to capitalize trouble, and no unrest so fits his purpose as that which arises from economic difficulty. The fact that the Soviet republics are by no means free from the general economic situation is no deterrent. On the contrary and with his usual naivete, the Communist agent will continue to enlarge upon the intolerable condition of the world at large in contrast to the near-millennium which, on Communist authority, is at hand in Russia.

But propaganda of this sort has lost much of its former plausibility as an understanding of the nature and status of the experiment in Russia has grown. Probably the most serious check to the Communist program in the West is found in the increasing determination of Western peoples to discover whether the Communist experiment contains any lessons which may be of value to the social and economic systems which the West has built up. The revolutionist has scant chance to overthrow an order which reveals its capacity for readjustment.

Meanwhile it is not likely that the vigilance now exercised toward Soviet-supported troublemakers will be relaxed. So far, at any rate, nothing has come from the Russian experiment to indicate that the manifold problems of today's world, East and West, would find speedier or more tolerable solution if red agents were allowed a free hand.

BABY FEET.

Pretty little baby feet,
Pink and plump and oh, so sweet!
Chubby legs and dimpled knees,
Where are lovelier sights than these?
It is sad to think some day
All their charm must pass away.

Pitter-patter round they go,
Little toes like pearls a-row.
Little heels so smooth and pink
It is curious to think
With the passing of the years
So much beauty disappears.

Time so many changes brings;
Grown up feet are ugly things,
Twisted, gnarled and callous-scarred,
For the road of life is hard.
Older grown those feet will be
Not so beautiful to see.

But the loss of baby charm
In itself brings little harm.
What if every pretty toe
With the years must ugly grow,
Glorious still those feet will stay
If they never run astray.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Flapper Daughter.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

MY DEAR LOUISE: Since this is your first year in college and your first time away from home for more than six days in a row I suspect there will be dark hours when you will think the world is mad at you and life is vain.

If there are such hours you may be tempted to conclude that education is a waste of time and effort and useful only as a form of punishment.

Anticipating that state of mind, I wish to tell you a thing or two about the advantages of a college diploma.

Don't yawn yet. I don't intend to repeat the usual hokum. I merely wish to give you a measuring rod for your abilities and a means of predicting your future.

The statistical sharps will tell you, as they delight in telling everybody, that schooling affords a certain means of getting on in the world because it increases the ability to make money. Every time a common school product makes 70 cents the high school graduate makes a dollar; and for every dollar made by the high school graduate the college man makes three.

The figures are authentic; and since your sex is now in the saddle, they apply to women as well as to men.

But you needn't take them seriously, for they are mixed with poppycock to give the schools more credit than they deserve.

The truth is, the best men and women are college products because the best men and women go to college.

The college product does not win because he went to college, but because he was a natural-born winner scheduled to come out on top in any case.

People can't succeed without education, but they can get an education without going to school. Edison got no schooling, but has a wonderful education. The advantage of a college is that it affords an easy way to get the training one must have to get anywhere.

College doesn't give anybody brains, and no school can make a youngster think or force an education on him. Making him attend school against his will is a waste of time and money.

If you have the right stuff in you—the stuff that would make you a fine woman in any case—you will take what the college has to give and store up ammunition for life.

If you haven't the wit or the character to stick and win, why, education wouldn't do you any good anyway, so you lose nothing by falling out.

I'm not uneasy, dear. I'm just telling you that the will to get an education is worth more than the education itself. Love, DAD.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

INTERNATIONAL YACHT RACE SOCIAL NOTES.

Newport, R. I.—Col. T. Whippingham Merps and guests are rolling heavily here in the colonel's yacht, Juniper III. As it is difficult enough for the colonel to keep on an even keel under normal conditions he is under a particularly severe strain just now.

Gen. and Mrs. Jocelyn Jay Crummett, of the Oyster Bay Crummetts, arrived today for the races aboard their new 60-footer, the Flying Artichoke. The ship was made from the general's own designs, and the guests who endured the maiden trip know he is crazy.

Another batch of guests rowed ashore from Pitching Patsy, the 50-foot cruiser owned by Mr. K. L. Gerald Faulkstone-Faulkstone, carrying their baggage with them. They were quite disgusted, alleging that for the second time Mr. Faulkstone-Faulkstone had followed the wrong yachts out to sea and missed the Enterprise-Shamrock race entirely.

The most indignant yachtsman in the harbor is Mr. Wingate X. Puddicombe, the motion-picture mogul, who came to the international races on an enormous houseboat especially chartered for the occasion and is yet to see any mention of the fact in the newspapers. His boat hasn't even been included in the list of arrivals. Mr. Puddicombe will wait one more day for a little publicity and if it isn't forthcoming will take drastic measures and ram a committee boat or something.

Col. Humphreys W. Martingale left his 80-foot express cruiser, Einnej (spelled backward it is the name of an old flame of the colonel's named Jennie) very hurriedly this morning, in response to an unexpected visit by several uncouth looking persons in a motor launch. It seemed he was four months behind in the time payments. Some adjustment was evidently made as the colonel still had the yacht at sunset.

What to do about Mr. Waddingham McGann, who made millions in oil gushers quite suddenly a few years ago, is a real problem. After leaving his 50-footer, the Scofflaw Queen, to row around and sober up a bit after a wild party aboard the craft last night, he got slightly confused and returned to the wrong boat, the Gypsy's Curse IV, owned by one of the Vanderbilts. The mistake was discovered when Mr. McGann got up in the morning, went to Mrs. Vanderbilt's cabin and shouted in a very disgraceful manner, "Where've you been all the time?"

A bottle thrown from one of the windows of the Dipping Daphne some time during the night went through a cabin window of the Wallowing Walrus, lacerating the scalp of its owner, Jasonsby Chulmstetters, who was extremely indignant when he examined the bottle and found it empty.

A sailor was executed today at sunrise aboard Mason P. Mintjulep's brand-new $250,000 cruiser, the White Queen. It seems he had scratched a match on a cabin door.

"Elsie Janis Quits Stage After 25 Years."—headline. It must have been hypnotic.

The Democrats of Connecticut have named a Yale dean for governor, and the Republicans are now said to be considering running Albie Booth.

An enterprising publicity man has hit on the idea of distributing buttons with the inscription, "Business Is Good." And it would be pretty ironical if he found himself stuck with them.

If a man builds a better mousetrap than any other man the world will make a path to his door, and then raze the house and build a Tom Thumb golf course.

Where, oh where, is the sun tan of yesterday?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Refugees Tell of Terrible Conditions in Communist Prison Camps at Archangel.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Norwegian newspaper, Aftenposten, has printed an interview with two men who recently ran away from the exile camp in Archangel and are now in Oslo, Norway.

While they were in the camp the number of prisoners there increased from 4,500 to 8,000.

New prisoners arrive daily. The largest percentage of them were peasants. To each 100 prisoners there were not less than 50 peasants; then came merchants, priests and others.

The peasants were mostly from the Kuban, Toula and Twer governments, and also from the Volga regions. The refugees say that according to these peasants there are constant uprisings against the Reds in these regions.

The peasants are being exiled to the northern provinces literally in hundreds of thousands.

Wood and other merchandise is loaded for export in Archangel exclusively by the prisoners. They work in groups under supervision of agents of the Ogpu, who are armed with revolvers, but on account of the foreigners present these agents during work put on the same kind of torn clothing as the prisoners, and conceal their weapons.

For their forced labor the prisoners receive scrip, which is good only in the camp. The prisoners drag out a miserable existence. Those who work in the forests are in still worse condition, and die off in large numbers.

The two refugees also asserted that, contrary to the general opinion abroad, it is not Stalin who is the "steel man" of the country, but Voroshiloff. I. MISHTOWT.

Mr. Cramton Glorious in Defeat—Just the Right Man to Champion the Dry Cause.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Within the past few days The Post has carried several editorial squibs of thinly concealed delight over the defeat of Representative Cramton, of Michigan. The basis of satisfaction over his defeat grows out of his severe attitude toward the fiscal policy of the Government affecting the District of Columbia. I do not think that any local taxpayer would agree with Mr. Cramton's policy of imposing upon local residents the lion's share of the expense for improving the Nation's Capital. If the Nation covets the most beautiful Capital in the world, the Nation ought to pay for it. However, Mr. Cramton can not be deprived of the credit of taking the masterful leadership in projecting the comprehensive scheme of improvements. The educational statesmanship of Mr. Cramton should also be commended. He devised and pushed through the policy whereby the Federal Government could legally support Howard University, thereby rendering constructive service to the cause of national education.

Representative Cramton went down to glorious defeat in the cause of prohibition. The first defeat in a noble cause is but the initial step to final triumph. Mr. Cramton is only 55 years of age; he is in the midst of the fullness and maturity of his powers and is adequately equipped with public knowledge and experience. The cause of temperance calls for just such men as he, strong, young, determined and unafraid. The impending titanic issue between the wets and the drys is destined to agitate this Nation as nothing else has done since the Civil War. It will require the same type of consecrated, patriotic championship to save the Nation from rum as it did then to save it from rebellion. KELLY MILLER.

Rid Washington of Sharpers and Shady Dealers Before Boasting That It Is the City Beautiful.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post is doing a real public service in showing up the inner workings of prohibition enforcement, or rather the "elastic" enforcement of the law. I am glad, also, to see an expose of the loan shark racket. Let the good work go on.

Our city is suffering from the ingrowing pains of expansion. We are so busy with the project of making our Capital an architectural masterpiece that we seem to have little time to devote to the actual work of keeping the fakers and racketeers from plying their trade. We have been in the past a mecca for about every kind of crooked scheme.

Now, before we gloat too much over our city beautiful, would it not be a good idea for the police to clean up the place first?

JOHN K. RAMSEY.

PLANT YOUR TREE FOR WASHINGTON.

Ten million trees planted this year in honor of George Washington. That, says the Detroit News, is the proposal of the American Tree Association as a fitting recognition of the 200th anniversary of the birth of the Father of His Country, which occurs in February, 1932. The enterprise is quite in the spirit manifested by Washington; doubtless he would be more pleased by the success of such an undertaking than by the erection of statues and monuments and holding ephemeral expositions.

History decreed that George Washington should be remembered as a general, statesman and patriot. Probably his highest ambition was to be his country's best farmer. His military achievements never loomed large in his imagination. He foresaw very clearly the enormous difficulties in the way of the Republic that he had helped to institute. Following the War for Independence, during his retirement to private life, Washington wrote:

"I am led to reflect how much more delightful is the task of making improvements upon earth."

If he were here today, surveying the needs of the country that has risen to such sublime heights in ways he never could have imagined, surely the proposal to restore our forests would meet his heartiest approval. The month of his birth is not a suitable season for tree planting. "Plant the trees now," says the American Tree Association. "Let the 200th anniversary of Washington's birth see the worthy memorial completed."

Leiter Couple To Have Niece In Their Home

Daughter of Late Mrs. Colin Campbell to Live Here.

MR. AND MRS. JOSEPH LEITER will have their young niece, a daughter of the late Mrs. Colin Campbell, as a member of their family for the next few years. The child will be entered at the Formata School at Aiken, S. C., for the coming winter. She must be about the same age as Mr. and Mrs. Leiter's daughter, Miss Nancy Leiter, and it is not beyond the bounds of possibility that the two girls may make their debut at the same time a few years hence.

All of the three beautiful Leiter girls, sisters of Mr. Leiter, daughters of the late Mr. and Mrs. Levi Z. Leiter and famous belles in the Washington of a generation ago, married Englishmen. But after the death of her husband, Mrs. Colin Campbell, who was Miss Nancy Leiter, felt a tightening of the ties binding her to her native land and spent a good deal of time before her death in California. Her son, named Colin for his father, has also been in this country a good deal and has visited the Leiters here.

Mr. Leiter always had a peculiarly deep affection for his sister, Nancy, and it was for her that his daughter, Nancy, was named. The eldest of the Leiter girls, Miss Mary Leiter, married Lord Curzon, it will be remembered, and was at one time Vicereine of India. She died a good many years ago. The former Miss Daisy Leiter is now the Countess of Suffolk and lives in England.

Mr. and Mrs. Leiter are still lingering at their seaside home at Beverly Farms, Mass., where they have been since their return from Europe, and so far they have set no date for their homecoming. Mr. Frederick Sterling, United States Minister to the Irish Free State, and Mrs. Sterling, a sister of Mrs. Leiter, who spent some time with the Leiters on the North Shore, have sailed on their return journey to their post. And Mrs. Leiter's mother, Mrs. John R. Williams, closed her cottage at Beverly a week or so ago, returning to Washington after saying bon voyage to the Sterlings.

Mrs. Williams now has as her guest Mrs. Bryce Allen, of Boston, who spent last winer in Washington, and who, with the view of remaining through the coming winter, is looking for a house.

Persian Kitty Ends Sojourn In Washington

Army Officers' Wives Act as Chaperons on Return Trip.

Society ladies, in search of pleasure on long summer days, have no monopoly on vacation jaunts. Persian kittens of high degree also claim their right of position among holiday makers and end their summer wanderings only at the close of the season. Some of them even delay their return home from the National Capital until a President and First Lady have given their last garden party of the year.

It happened this way.

Yesterday a real social registerite of the fluffy family of Persian descent was duly chaperoned on its return journey to New York and safely delivered to its mistress in her home in the metropolis. And two charming members of Washington society, Mrs. A. R. Emery, wife of Col. Emery, and Mrs. Robert C. Cotton, wife of Maj. Cotton, were the chaperones. They delayed the return of the kitten to Mrs. Charles H. Bonesteel in New York until after the garden party at the White House on Thursday, leaving here yesterday with the precious cargo. The cat had spent the summer in Washington. It will pass the "season" in New York as any wise kitten, bent on recognition, would do. Mrs. Emery and Mrs. Cotton will remain for a few days as the guests of Maj. and Mrs. Bonesteel.

Hurley Fetes Fidac Envoys At Club Dinner

Secretary and Assistant Dean of G. U. School Are Speakers.

With Mr. Patrick J. Hurley, Secretary of War, as host, delegates to Fidac and the Fidac Auxiliary were entertained at dinner last evening at the Congressional Country Club. This was one of the most delightful of the many festivities arranged for the group attending the double convention, as the guests remained after dinner to dance. Addresses—very brief—were made by Secretary Hurley, by Dr. Thomas H. Healy, assistant dean of the Georgetown Foregn Service School, and by Col. John Brown, vice president of Fidac for Great Britain.

Guests at this dinner numbered 225 and included, besides the delegates, such distinguished personages as Gen. John J. Pershing, the Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Frederick H. Payne, Brig. Gen. Herbert Crosby, Commissioner of the District, and Mrs. Crosby; Commissioner and Mrs. Luther Reichelderfer, Representative Fred H. Hartley and Dr. Healy—to name but a few at random.

Great Britain being the "Nation of the Day" at the Fidac convention, it was a Briton chosen to make the principal speech at the dinner, and another, Lady Edward Spencer-Churchill, was the principal speaker at the luncheon given at the Mayflower by the American Legion Auxiliary for the Fidac Auxiliary. Mrs. Edward Everett Gann was among the women from official society present on this occasion, when the guests numbered 75.

Luncheon was served in the presidential dining room. Tables were arranged in horseshoe fashion with low centerpieces of gladioluses, dahlias and asters. A huge golden ball holding a collection of flags of the allied nations was suspended from the ceiling and back of the speakers' table were arranged American and British flags.

At the same time the American Legion gave a luncheon for the delegates to Fidac, only men being present. This, too, was held at the Mayflower.

SEARCH FOR JUDGE TURNS TO HALIFAX

Hotel Barber Is Positive He Shaved Missing Jurist Last Wednesday.

OWNS PROPERTY THERE

New York, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—Search for Supreme Court Justice Joseph Crater, missing since August 6, turned to Nova Scotia today on what police considered a promising clew.

Dispatches from Halifax said a hotel barber there was positive he had shaved Justice Crater last Wednesday morning. The barber, A. W. Eulath, told a sergeant of the provincial police his customer strongly resembled several photographs of the jurist.

Inquiries at the hotel failed to disclose any clerk who recalled a guest answering Crater's description. It was recalled here, however, an acquaintance of the missing man recently told District Attorney Crain that Justice Crater informed him of a house he owned in a secluded part of Nova Scotia.

Mrs. Stella Crater, the jurist's wife, drew a sharp retort from the district attorney when he was informed she refused to appear before a grand jury investigating the judge's disappearance.

"In my judgment," Crain said, "Mrs. Crater is now and has been for some time engaged in impeding the investigation into her husband's disappearance. What her motive is I do not know, but at the proper time and in the proper way I shall take such steps as may be appropriate to overcome her reticence."

Police continued their search for a woman known as Lorraine Fay. Dr. Samuel Buchler, a lawyer and former State and city official, said yesterday this woman told him she contemplated instituting a $100,000 breach of promise suit against Justice Crater on the day before he disappeared.

Dr. Charles G. Abbot To Lead Prayer Service

Dr. Charles G. Abbot, the celebrated astronomer who is head of the Smithsonian Institute, will conduct the prayer service at First Congregational Church Thursday evening, following the church supper.

He will talk on "The Psalm of Moses." That talk should be worth listening to.

Behind the Screens

With NELSON B. BELL

It was a pleasant surprise, upon entering the newly reopened Rialto Theater yesterday for the second performance, beginning at 1, to find the house filled to capacity, with a considerable number of standees at the back awaiting their turns to file down the long aisles for single seats that were being vacated at seemingly interminable intervals.

This was a condition that transported one who is not unfamiliar with the early history of the Rialto back to the dedicatory days of Tom Moore's "Temple of the Muses," when a box office queue extending around the corner into G street was the rule rather than the exception.

Without at all having in mind the publication of a review of the feature picture 24 hours ahead of The Post's complete Sunday review department, it may nevertheless be said that "Little Accident," the inaugural feature, is evidently composed of ingredients the public finds savory, but not too pungent.

If a propitious opening is any augury of a successful season—and certainly it is an infinitely more eloquent omen of prosperity than a half or wholly empty theater—then the Rialto may look forward to a recurrence of the opulent days of its very early youth.

For the sake of those who will attend the Rialto at least this week and next, it is to be hoped that "Slim" Summerville still rates as high a ranking among comedians with the general public as he does with this commentator.

"Slim" not only plays an important part in "Little Accident," but is also star of the foremost of the bill's auxiliaries, a two-reel dialogue comedy of the French front during the war, called "Parlez Vous," and next week will be no less importantly cast in support of Lewis Ayres and Louis Wolheim in Universal's picturization of Remarque's "All Quiet on the Western Front," one of the most notable films of recent production.

Since public acknowledgment has already been made to several helpful correspondents for prompt aid in establishing the identity of the original Derek with John Barrymore in "The Sea Beast," it seems no more than fair to express similar gratitude to Elizabeth Franzoni, Miss Greta, A. B. C. D., D. K., and the one or two anonymous writers whose proffered assistance arrived a mail or two later.

It is perhaps a significant fact that a large majority of the score or so who have written in to inform me that George O'Hara was the first Derek, have expressed an emphatic preference for "The Sea Beast," Barrymore's earlier silent picture, to the later dialogue version of "Moby Dick," presented under the same title as the novel, which closed its engagement at the Earle Theater Thursday night. This might be a straw—if there were a wind!

In case you are interested:

Marie Dressler has had the same colored maid for seventeen years, which probably means that she has had one colored maid for that length of time and not many maids of one color during that time.

The house Wallie Reid once owned and lived in has been bought by Clive Brook and is occupied by him as his residence.

Lloyd Hughes has recently risked his reputation as a screen hero by appearing in "Moby Dick" as a young but energetic villain, and with Al Jolson in "Big Boy" as a scapegrace, weakling son of an aristocratic old Southern family.

George Arliss is peculiarly faithful to his former associates in plays and silent pictures. Ivan Simpson has appeared in practically every production Arliss has offered for the past fifteen years. Doris Lloyd, who appeared with him as the feminine menace in "Disraeli," is his leading woman in "Old English," now at the Metropolitan. For "The Green Goddess," Arliss asked for Alice Joyce, who had played with him in the silent version many years before.

Hollywood luncheon conversation has it that Douglas Fairbanks, pere, has never been wholly satisfied with any picture he has ever made and hopes his next will be the climax of them all and his farewell.

An estimate of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, recently issued, showed that less than 20 per cent of the young women now journeying to the movie capital do so with the intention of trying to get in pictures. In past years the percentage has been as high as 80.

Mary Brian has been employed steadily since she stepped into one of the important roles, without previous experience, in "Peter Pan" five years ago.

The managing director of the housekeeping department of the Bell menage having departed for a late summer respite at the seashore, and the cook having likewise evanesced, this column will exchange one sinkful of soiled breakfast dishes for one slice of toast that is not burned or a cup of coffee that can be distinguished from scorched shellac.—(Adv.)

U. S. INTERNATIONAL POLICIES OUTLINED TO FIDAC CONGRESS

of the united veterans and declared that "the American Navy is in sympathy with your great federation, heart and soul."

Secretary Hurley, at the outset of his remarks at the dinner, committed the Federal Government to Fidac's aims in asserting that "we all fully indorse the purpose for which Fidac was organized and the course it has taken since its organization." He added that "its purpose is to promote understanding between the soldiers who served in the armies of the Allies and associated governments during the World War.

"We were told during the World War that we were engaged in a tremendous conflict to end all wars," he continued. "That promise made to soldiers seems now almost forgotten, and we again hear of wars and rumors of wars. Those of us who served in the World War owe it to our comrades who have gone before us to promote understanding.

"Ignorance is one of the chief causes of war. Intolerance is the child of ignorance. Modern wars usually grow out of racial and economic intolerance. With our present systems for the transmission of word and thought, it should be possible for the people of the different nations to understand the people of other nations. An understanding of the motives of others would serve to eliminate many of the points of friction.

"This understanding can be reached without impugning nationalism or patriotism of the citizenship of any nation. My own country has no imperialistic designs. It desires to live on terms of peace and amity with all mankind. We welcome the effort of our comrades in Fidac to bring about a closer understanding and a closer harmony between those of all nations who served together in the World War and to promote peace and good will on earth."

American Legion Praised.

Representing Great Britain, as the honored nation of the day's convention program, Col. John Brown, in a dinner address, paid high tribute to the American Legion as a crusader for peace.

"The British Legion is in Fidac for no other purpose than to serve alongside their comrades of the war years for the peaceful progress of our countries. Let me say I believe that before a man can be a good internationalist he must first take a pride in his own country, and we have therefore been much touched with the national pride of your people and particularly of our comrades of the American Legion, and their enthusiasm is bound to help forward the peaceful progress of your country.

"We of the British Legion represent one county's efforts in those dark days of 1914-1918. Eight and three-quarters million flocked to the colonies, on the sea, under the sea, in the air, on land, in every contingent of the globe they fought.

Has No Regrets.

"No single incident of the great war affected one people more than the fact that your free Nation joined in the fight for a freer world.

"May I also sound another note at a time when I find much interest aroused in the economic position of Great Britain. We recall with pride that Great Britain has at much sacrifice faced with resolute determination the financial burden of post-war days. It has meant heavy taxation, but it has also meant, I believe, increased prestige in the eyes of the world. I have not a single regret."

Done Valuable Work.

Dr. Healy warmly praised the peace promoting activities of Fidac.

"The Fidac can and has on a number of specific occasions done considerable aviuable work in removing causes of friction between those nations which were allied during the World War," he declared.

"The siging of the famous Fidac peace charter at New Orleans eight years ago was another important move in the cause of world peace. The influence of this charter is seen from the fact that, at least in part, it has been incorporated into a number of international peace and arbitration treaties. In many respects it was the forerunner of the Kellogg-Briand pact for outlawing war, which pact it antedated by six years.

"Fidac can be a tremendous power in promoting better international understandings and thus obviating too frequent recourse to war, if the national organizations which make up Fidac and their individual members will insist in an active way in each of their respective countries that the principles of the peace charter, particularly in reference to open diplomacy, be carried out when disputes arise between their nations and other countries.

World Peace Is Goal.

"World peace is your goal. Misunderstanding based on lack of bnowledge is your principal obstacle. You have the means at your disposal to remove this obstacle and thus achieve your goal. Every right thinking man and woman in the world will applaud and second your work toward this end. You, who were gloriously victorious in war, must not and will not fail in peace."

Secretary Jahncke, in speaking before the assembly upon its opening yesterday morning in the Carlton Hotel, a change from Continental Memorial aHll, asserted that "the activities of 9,000,000 soldiers of the World War dedicated to the realization of that war's pledge 'to end all war' can not fail to have a most potent influence for peace.

"The veterans of the American Legion, like the veterans of other lands that freely offered their life's blood for their ideals of God and country represented the best citizenship of the land," he continued. "By its affiliation with your federation the legion has demonstrated to this country that practical peace measures need have nothing in common with pacifist societies that seek to undermine patriotism and inculcate in youth the spirit of contempt for our institutions."

Castle Welcomes Auxiliary.

The auxiliary, meanwhile, were welcomed by Assistant Secretary of State William R. Castle. He termed Fidac Auxiliary "a bulwark of peace."

Returning from Mount Vernon, the delegates were guests of the American Legion Post and the American Legion Auxiliary of Alexandria at the clubhouse at the famous old Gadsby's Tavern, where Gov. John Garland Pollard and his daughter, Miss Sue Pollard, acted with Mayor and Mrs. Carroll Pierce, of Alexandria, as head of the welcoming committee, the Governor and Miss Pollard making the trip from Richmond solely for htis purpose, were accompanied by John J. Wicker, past State commander of the American Legion.

Today's program will include the presentation of Fidac awards by Brig. Gen. L. R. Gignilliat at the morning session at the Carlton Hotel, a luncheon at the Washington Hotel with Col. J. Miller Kenyon as principal speaker, and a state dinner tonight at the Willard Hotel, where the delegates will be guests of Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson. Addresses will be made by Col. Paul V. McNutt, former national commander of the American Legion, and a representative of the Italian delegation.

Announcement was made yesterday that special services will be conducted for the visitors at 11 o'clock Sunday morning in the Chapel of St. Joseph of Arimathea in Washington Cathedral by the Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, canon of Washington, acting in the absence of Bishop James E. Freeman. Prior to the services, an official Fidac delegation will participate in brief ceremonies at the tomb of Woodrow Wilson, where a wreath will be laid.

Store Clerks, Attention

"For two years I suffered with irregularities and finally had to leave school. I got no relief until my married sister told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking only two bottles I felt well. Since then I have been able to clerk in a store, on my feet all day and have suffered only once from my old trouble. I want other girls, especially store clerks, to know what it did for me."—Dorothy L. Fairchild, 924 Walnut Street, Freeland, Pennsylvania.

FORMAL opening of the Radio World's Fair at Madison Square Garden, New York, on Monday will be broadcast from its crystal studio, beginning at 8:45 o'clock, with the Roxy program.

Roxy will open the program with an address, then introduce M. H. Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting Co.; H. P. Davis, president of the Westinghouse Co.; Dr. Frank Conrad, assistant chief engineer of the same company, and C. W. Horn, general engineer of the National Broadcasting Co. Dr. Conrad was the owner of the first broadcasting station in this country to carry regularly scheduled presentations, which later became known as KDKA.

Both networks will present many of their regular features from the crystal studios during the coming week.

Red-headed Bernadine Hayes, of Station WBBM, Chicago, is the most beautiful radio artist in America, as announced by the Radio World's Fair committee. Miss Hayes will be heard during the Roxy program Monday evening and again next Wednesday evening (WMAL, 7 o'clock) during the Manhattan Moods presentation.

OSWALD F. SCHUETTE, executive secretary of the Radio Protective Association, who is always alert to head off any gains of the Radio Corporation of America and its associates, hurriedly sent a warning telegram to Secretary Lamont after it had been announced that the Commerce Department head was to speak at the new plant opening of RCA at Camden, N. J., last night.

Secretary Lamont just as quickly replied that he had canceled the engagement seven days previously "on account of important matters here."

Duke Ellington and his Cotton Club Orchestra will begin a weekly series of 15th broadcasts from Station WEAF tonight.

UNLESS some unusual atmospheric condition interrupts, Merlin H. Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting Co., declares its networks can deliver the sound of the human voice over every square mile of our vast country.

William H. Paley, president of Columbia Broadcasting System, lost no time in making the assertion that his company's broadcasts can be heard on 99 per cent of the receiving sets in the United States.

Whether the rumors concerning the political maneuvering behind the award of a temporary license to Station WISJ, of Madison, Wis., are true or not, the broadcasting unit, which is owned by the Wisconsin State Journal, stanch supporter of Walter J. Kohler in the Republican primary, was not able to put the incumbent governor across.

Station WBBM, key station of Columbia, obtained an injunction against the Wisconsin station on the eve of the primary because of alleged interference. The temporary permit had been granted eight days previously, with the approval, it is said, of G. O. P. leaders.

HOMINY DISHES

(Bureau of Home Economics.)

Hominy Turnovers

1 pint cooked coarse hominy.
1 cup milk.
1 teaspoon salt.
2 well-beaten eggs.
1 tablespoon fat.

Mix all together. Turn into a frying pan in which the fat has been melted. Stir until hot throughout. Let it cook until golden brown on the bottom, then fold like an omelet and serve on a hot platter. This is suitable for the main dish at supper or luncheon.

Scalloped Hominy

Arrange in a baking dish alternate layers of boiled coarse hominy and minced meat or fish or grated cheese. Pour over all a cup of white sauce and bake for thirty minutes. This may be used as the principal part of the meat course.

Jane Interprets the MODE

New York, Sept. 19.

"AND zen zee cook left, ezzactly at 10 o'clock!" chuckled the charming French lady who looks and acts like Sarah Bernhardt, when she was telling me about her last trip to America.

"Good Heavens, what did the hostess do!" I exclaimed. "Oh, she zen put on an ador-able aproh, and finished serving ze dinner herself!"

And everybody enjoyed themselves immensely, the dinner was a success, the cook is still glorying in her "rights," and I personally think that the hostess was secretly delighted with the opportunity to revert to the feminine thrill of her "adorable little apron."

Apron Popular Again.

For the little apron has come into its own again, after all these years of being discarded in favor of arty smocks and what-not, and all the Paris stores that make those dainty hand-embroidered and ruffled and pleated "lingerie" things (you know, collars and cuffs, fine underwear, and babies' things?) are blossoming forth with delightful little tea aprons, which sometimes cost even more than the frock they are supposed to be protecting.

There are aprons and aprons, of course, but I am not speaking of the practical ones that milady housewife dons to do the dishes in, but rather the dainty little ones she wears when serving or helping to serve tea—the kind she whimsically ties on over her evening gown when the gang comes home after the theater or in the much wee-er and smaller hours of the morning looking for ham and eggs.

That's an idea, isn't it, if you haven't given that idea a lot of thought before! Better stock up with a flock of these dainty lingerie aprons, and the next time you get the chance, dazzle your friends with their delightfully feminine inconsistency, the while you actually do save your pretty gown from a couple of stray sandwich crumbs or galivanting lettuce leaves.

* * * *

And start out right by sending a stamped self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post this very minute, to get her leaflet of adorable and unusual apron designs, which you can either make yourself or have the dressmaker make. And by the way, don't forget that even though it's only September, Christmas or any other gift-time for that matter, is not so very far off—and a dainty apron of this type might be just the very gift you would want to give some one!

Little Tots' Corner.

'Tis said that the French youngsters are the cunningest kids in the world. Sometimes you can not help believing this, when you see these beautifully dressed (but not fussily so) little darlings playing on their respective lawns or in the parks.

And for very little sister, the lingerie apron serves both as a decoration and a protection to her dainty gowns. Very often this apron is the only decorative note to a simple dress of the same material, and wise mammas do not forget that the apron is so much more easily laundered than the dress. Hence the apron may be very much more embroidered and pleated and ruffled than the dress.

What Today Means to You

"VIRGO."

IF September 20 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a. m. to noon, from 4 p. m. to 5 p. m. and from 9 p. m. to 10 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:30 a. m. to 8 a. m. and from 2:30 p. m. to 3:30 p. m.

Your character will be tested upon this date, and the precept that kind hearts mean more than coronets, will be proven to you by friends. Very unusual psychic influences. Your heart will be disturbed, but your material interests will go smoothly and well.

Children born on this September 20 will be given active natures, mental excitability and emotionalism. They will have a desire to excel, and their personalities will tend to override restraint. They will be generous, ardent and enthusiastic—wilful and sometimes rebellious.

You are not a follower of the gospel of despair. Your desires are not dampened by inhibitory impulses and warnings. You see possibilities, when others can only see a mass of difficulties. Your positive attitude, your self-confidence, and your courage win your battles for you. You are not an "I can't-er." You are gifted with the energy to see things through, and the world appreciates your stability and steadfast purpose.

You lead an unselfish life, and you champion those suffering under injustice, and help and sympathize with those in sorrow. You are a genius for discovering hidden charms in people—an extraordinary interest in the dull woman, or a vein of tenderness in the horrid man. You look beneath ugly exteriors for the spirit beneath, and you see what can be made of common things. You do not treat people casually.

You have good judgment and a good memory, and a good business head. You like unraveling problems—the more knots the better. You are never impatient, as long as there is a spark of hope, and many of your successes come after long, tedious periods of waiting, watching, hoping and working. Your appreciation of the beautiful in nature is very intense, and you are quick to observe her tiniest efforts—in a garden, a field or a window. You have sacred ideas about home and marriage, and you will fight to maintain your ideas.

Successful people born September 20:

David R. Locke, humorist.

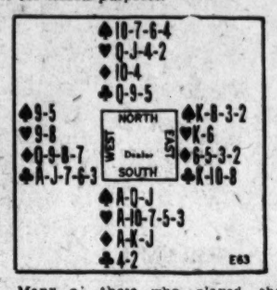
Dr. ZeBarney Phillips Returns From Europe

Dr. ZeBarney Phillips, rector of the Church of the Epiphany, is back in his parish, refreshed and enthused from a long vacation in Europe, where he went particularly to see the Passion Play at Oberammergau, and at Cape Cod, Mass. At his evening service tomorrow he begins a series of interpretations of the Passion Play, which will be given in the form of lecture sermons.

WORK ON BRIDGE

(This article is intended for the Auction and Contract Bridge beginner.)

I was much interested in watching the following hand played at a Duplicate Auction match recently, and took a copy of it in order to preserve it for lesson purposes.



Many of those who played the South hand obtained the contract with a bid of one No Trump. West led the Club six, dummy played small, East finessed the Ten, and five Clubs were run immediately, saving game. If dummy played the Queen it was even easier for East, as he did not have to finesse. South's three discards were the Jacks of Spades and Diamonds and a Heart. After the Clubs were run, West led a Diamond and eventually East made his King of Hearts.

At the tables at which South bid a Heart, he obtained the contract and West opened with the Ace of Clubs, following with the Jack; and a third Club lead forced the South hand. South ruffed with his Five of Hearts and by leading Diamonds three times put dummy in with a ruff to lead the Heart Queen. If East play the King, the Jack and Four become entries to enable dummy to lead Spades twice and five-odd can be made; if East duck, game still can be made.

If the hand were played at Contract, the same bidding principle would apply: No Trump never should be bid with an unstopped suit and a good major of five cards or longer. At Contract South should bid two Hearts, showing six tricks, but at Auction one Heart would be the bid.

There is quite a difference between making game at Hearts and no game at No Trump.

Answers to Inquiries.

A YEAR ago I bought two roses, both of which wilted and died. This year I replaced the plants and now these new bushes are dying. Can it be due to worms in the soil? If you think it is a case of worms please tell me how to destroy them.

MRS. M. M. P.

It is not a case of worms. Likely you have omitted to spread the roots at the time of planting or soil conditions may not suit roses. Again, you may not be giving them sufficient water. Roses should be grown in rich soil and should be kept very moist at the roots. The soil of a rosebed should be cultivated at least once in ten days. If your plants are growing in shade that is likely the cause of their dying. Roses must have sun. If you care to write again, telling me something about the conditions under which your are attempting to grow your plants, I can likely tell you exactly where you are making your mistake.

Please tell me what is the matter with my tree, of which I am inclosing two leaves.

LIL. D.

Your tree is attacked by a blight. Better have it sprayed with lime sulphur.

Would appreciate receiving some information relative to failure of my peony plants to bloom last year and this year, whereas every previous year they have bloomed profusely. There was a wealth of foliage, both this year and last year, and last year one of the plants had two flowers and the other plant had no bloom. This year neither of the bushes has bloomed at all.

E. L. L.

Peonies must be well watered and well fed in order to bear profusely. They should be growing in the sun and all grass or weds must be kept away from the roots. The soil about their roots must not be cultivated. The reason being that the rootlets grow quite close to the surface of the soil and the slightest turning of the soil will be sure to injured them. Try watering the plants thoroughly three times a week. Scatter some bone meal over the soil and apply the garden hose to carry it down to the feeding roots. Repeat the application every three weeks until frost. With such treatment your plants should bear next season. There is a possibility, if your plants are over nine years old, that they may need lifting and dividing.

I am inclosing a foxglove leaf which is taken from one of my plants. Something is eating and killing them. Please tell me what it is and also suggest a remedy. MRS. I. R. E.

Your foxgloves are attacked by red spiders. Better spray with a reliable nicotine spray. One application will accomplish little. You will have to keep up the spraying for several weeks. Once in ten days will be often enough to apply the spray.

Please tell me when is the proper time to transplant German iris.

MRS. M.

You can do this work any time between the time they cease blooming and frost. Incorporate some bonemeal with the soil before planting.

Please tell me how to take care of peonies. Mine fail to bloom. Also, should tulips be kept in the ground over summer?

M. F.

By reading the answer to E. L. L. in this column you will receive the desired information regarding peonies. Tulips may be left in the ground if you do not need the space for summer flowers.

TWO MILK DELIVERIES.

DR. H. A. HARDING tells us that the plan of delivering milk twice daily is coming into general use in the Southwest. The object is to chill the product to 50 degrees within two hours after it is milked and, thereafter, to hold it below that level. He credits Kansas City with having originated the plan.

The writer does not know where the plan of a double daily milk delivery started, but he guesses that it gradually evolved. When getting milk from a neighbor was something of a custom there was a double delivery and prompt consumption. When the milk business was put on more of a commercial basis, certain health departments exerted their influence to have milk delivered twice daily.

Richmond, Va., achieved considerable reputation for a good milk supply and a low baby death rate. Double daily delivery of milk by farmers to the milk plants was an important part of the Richmond plan. As a part of the story is an experience with the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis. There was an epidemic among the student body which was charged against the college milk supply. The college authorities decided to put a refrigeration plant in the dairy and adjoining the cow barns. This made it possible to chill the milk almost to the freezing point within an hour after it was drawn from the cows. This change stopped the digestive disturbances charged against milk, and, as a side product, made milk the favorite beverage of the student body.

Just where, in point of time, Kansas City figured in this particular the writer does not know. The history shows the necessity of prompt and thorough chilling of the milk; how appreciation of this has slowly spread across the country. In some places the farm has a choice between chilling the milk on the farm on the one hand, or hauling it to the milk plant twice daily, on the other. Dr. Harding tells us that in some sections they have a third alternative—delivering milk once daily, but hauling back enough ice to keep the night's milk cold.

The increasing use of electricity and refrigeration on farms is improving the quality of the milk supply.

WOULD AVERT WEIGHT.

Miss E. writes:

1. Will yeast really make one fat? I have heard so much about the good it does, but I don't want to gain.

2. Some tell me if I cut down on my sweets and starches it will have no effect on my weight. Is this so?

3. Will you please name some foods rich in starch and sugar?

REPLY.

1. Yeast taken in the usual small quantities is not fattening. However, yeast is rich in vitamin B, and that vitamin stimulates appetite. Thus yeast may be fattening indirectly.

2. If you cut down your starches and sugars markedly, and keep them down, you will lose weight.

3. Candies, breads, cereals, pastries, desserts, sweet beverages, potatoes, beans, peas and corn.

EFFECT MAY BE PSYCHIC.

M. V. M. writes:

1. Given coffee from infancy up, I was very nervous and was troubled with insomnia. I quit coffee, and after that slept well and was not nervous. If I take ever so little coffee I can not sleep and am nervous.

2. I disagree with you that adults can not gain in height after 17 years of age. My mother came to this country from central Europe when she was 25 years old. After she came she grew from an undersized woman to one who was of medium height. Her brother was twice rejected for the army in Europe because he was under height. He began growing at 22 and reached medium height.

3. I know a man in Indiana who increased his height after maturity by stretching.

REPLY.

1. The effect on you from a single small dose of coffee may be psychic. Possibly you are sensitized to coffee.

2. In rare instances adults grow in height. There are diseases of the growth organs.

CARDS TIGHTEN PENNANT GRIP, BEATING PHILLIES, 7-3; NATS CLINCH SECOND PLACE WITH 8-4 WIN AT DETROIT

SUCCESSIVE HOMERS BY HAYES, HARGRAVE FEATURE OF VICTORY

Sorrell Is Hammered After Tigers Take Two-Run Lead.

Extra-Base Hits Win Game; Crowder Is Tight in Pinches.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 19.—Second place in the American League was clinched mathematically today by Washington when it defeated Detroit, 8 to 4, in the series opener here. By winning today, the Nationals take second money even should they lose their remaining seven games while the Yankees were winning the six they have yet to play.

It was a battle in which the Nats' timely hits and likewise the distance hits of Red Hargrave figured, the former Tiger being a distinct star in the latter respect as he crashed out a home run, tying the score in the third inning, came through with a useless triple in the sixth and closed his hitting activities with a two-bagger in the eighth.

Crowder Keeps 10 Tiger Hits Scattered.

Alvin Crowder gave the Tigers ten hits and kept them well scattered, aside from the sixth when four blows were combined for a pair of runs. Sorrell, who started for Detroit, was driven from the hill at the end of the fifth inning after six runs and eight hits had been collected. Hogsett finished and had one bad inning, the eighth, in which three hits went for a couple of runs.

Following a first inning of scoring inactivity the Tigers settled down in the second frame and scored twice, Alexander opening the session with a single to right. Doljack banged out a double to the scoreboard and Alexander drawing up at third when Manush made a nice recovery of the bounce off the wall.

Akers popped to Cronin and Hughes bounced one down first-base line. Judge tried to get Alexander going into the plate, but big Alex slid under Hargrave's stab and was safe. Hayworth slapped one to Cronin, who tossed to Myer retiring Hughes. Hayworth's slide upset Myer and his try for a double play saw the ball go to the dugout, allowing Doljack to score.

It did not take much time for the Nats to get these runs back. In fact, the first two balls pitched in the third inning saw matters evened up. Jack Hayes slapped the first pitched ball over left field fence and Hargrave rode the next ball into center field bleachers for the circuit.

Nats Take Lead as Cronin Triples.

Washington assumed the lead in the fourth inning when Cronin slammed a triple down third base line and went home after Judge filed to Doljack in center field. The latter made a great throw to the plate and Cronin was forced to slide to beat it.

Not content with this lead, the Nats continued with four hits, a base on balls and an error for three more counters in the fifth. All this was accomplished with two out. Myer singled over second and Rice followed with a one-base crash to right. Manush singled in the same direction, scoring Myer. Cronin walked, filling the bases, and Judge singled to left, scoring Rice and Manush. Hughes booted the ball, allowing Judge to reach second, and Cronin took third base. Harris fanned and this storm was over.

Crowder Yields Two Runs in Sixth.

Detroit made it hot for Crowder in the sixth inning, but was unable to carry the game into a deadlock, stopping with two runs. McManus hit the longest home run of the season, the ball going into the bleachers near the flagpole. Alexander singled and Doljack popped to Hargrave. Koenig, who supplanted Akers at short, singled. Hughes followed with a one-base smash to right, scoring Alexander, but was nipped at second when Rice made a nice throw after kicking the ball around. Hayworth grounded to Cronin, who went back of second to get the sizzling grounder.

Hogsett, who replaced Sorrell to start the sixth, held Washington scoreless until the eighth and then the Nats broke out with a brace of runs, Judge starting the proceedings with a single to left. Harris contributed a single to center and Hayes grounded to Gehringer, Judge scoring. Hargrave added to his hit collection by doubling off the scoreboard, Harris halting at third. Crowder grounded to Gehringer, the infield being in. Gehringer stepped on first and shot the ball home too late to double Harris at the plate. Myer bounced to Hogsett for the third out. This frame ended the scoring for the game.

NATS LAUDED BY JOHNSON ON RETURN

Showing Better Than Expected; Bluege Also Back.

MANAGER WALTER JOHNSON, of the Nationals, accompanied by Third Baseman Ossie Bluege, who is still suffering from a lacerated finger on his right hand as a result of being spiked, returned home yesterday morning and the Washington leader was particularly pleased last night when advised that his team had beaten the Tigers yesterday and thus was assured of second place money.

"I'm more than satisfied with our showing this season," Johnson said. "I'll admit that we did even better than I thought we would and, while I'm naturally disappointed that we fell a litle short of winning the pennant, I think the boys must be given credit for what they did accomplish. You know beating out six other clubs, including the Yankees and Indians, is something.

"Our place in the race was assured us when I wanted to get home to the kiddies," was Johnson's explanation for letting Capt. Joe Judge handle the reins over the balance of the route.

Gallagher Defeated In Fast Boston Bout

Boston, Mass., Sept. 19 (A.P.).—Dick Daniels, of Minneapolis, won a decision over Marty Gallagher, of Washington, D. C., here tonight in a hard-fought and fast bout.

Jones Seeded First; Voigt Third

Johnston Is Second; Von Elm, Sweetser Ranked Lower.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19. (A.P.).—The United States Golf Association agrees with the rest of the world that Robert T. Jones, jr., is the leading golfer. On the list of the "first ten" announced today for seeding the draw in the match play rounds of the National Amateur Championship at Merion Cricket Club next week, the name of Jones leads all the rest.

Following custom, the U. S. G. A. compiled two lists, the first in the order of merit and the second, arranged in alphabetical order, to replace any of the ranking stars failing to qualify.

The name of John Goodman, unplaced last year, is sixth in the first ten, while Phillips Finlay and F. J. Wright, jr., ninth and tenth last year, are not named. Goodman will be remembered as the Omaha youth who eliminated Bobby Jones in the first round at Del Monte.

Tolley Ranked Eighth.

The other eight were named in 1929, although the 1930 ranking is slightly different. George Voigt is No. 3, as he was then, but George Von Elm, No. 2 in 1929, is No. 4 in 1930, Harrison R. Johnston, the amateur champion, being placed next to Jones. Dr. O. F. Willing, runner-up in the last championship, was advanced from seventh to fifth. Jess Sweetster was dropped from fifth to tenth, and Francis Ouimet from fourth to seventh.

Robert T. Jones, jr., Atlanta.
Harrison R. Johnston, St. Paul.
George J. Voigt, New York.
George Von Elm, Detroit.
Dr. O. F. Willing, Portland, Oreg.
John Goodman, Omaha.
Francis Ouimet, Boston.
Cyril J. H. Tolley, London, Eng.
Donald K. Moe, Portland, Oreg.
Jess W. Sweetser, New York.

The second ten—Frank Dolp, Portland, Oreg.; G. T. Dunlap, jr., New York; H. Chandler Egan, Medford, Oreg.; Eugene Homans, New York; John Lehman, Chicago; Maurice J. McCarthy, jr., New York; Roland Mackenzie, Wilmington, Del.; Max R. Marston, Philadelphia; T. P. Perkins, New York; C. Ross Somerville, London, Ont.

Jones, took his threatened "trolley ride" today—to New Jersey where he practiced pitch shots and putts at the Pine Valley Golf Club.

Jones, here for the U. S. amateur championship battle beginning at Merion Monday, had been followed by a large gallery in his tuning-up play at Merion, and slipped away to Pine Valley to escape the crowds. He was accompanied by his close friend and fellow Atlantan, Thomas B. Paine, and the British star, Dale Bourn.

Awaiting him at the first tee was Jess Sweetser, winner of the British amateur in 1926, and Cyril Tolley, of England, holder of that title in 1929.

Paired with Bourn, Jones lost a spirited best-ball match to the Tolley-Sweetser duo by the close margin of one hole. Jones missed a 3-foot putt on the sixteenth green for a half when leading by one up, and Tolley dropped a spade shot 18 inches from the cup for a birdie on the seventeenth to take the lead for his side. Jones was out in 38, three over par, and back in 36, one over par. He seemed satisfied with his game after the first few holes. He spent the afternoon at a ball game.

While Jones was tuning up elsewhere, two brilliant shotmakers from California came along to administer a beating to Old Man Par at the Merion Cricket Club's championship east course. One of them, Gibson Dunlap, jr., equaled the course record when he lopped three strokes from par by scoring a 67. The other, George Von Elm, runner-up to Jones in 1924 for the national title, had a 69. Dunlap's 67 equaled the competitive record for Merion's east course, but it does not go down in the books as performing that feat, as it was not made in actual competition. The former Coast intercollegiate champion had a "hot" putter today, reeling off four birdies, at the seventh, thirtenth, fourteenth and fifteenth. The only hole on which he was over par was the eighteenth.

H. Chandler Egan, Medford, Oreg., and Silas Newton, of Swianoy, played

This is the seventh of a series of articles analyzing the strength of the possible world series rivals.

By AL MUNRO ELIAS (Famous Statistician).

THE short, stocky, all-shouldered figure of "the man McGraw forgot," Hack Wilson, of the Cubs, far overshadows any and all of his six center field rivals among the possible world's series contenders. Bad fielding and tough breaks almost combined to make Hack the goat of last fall's series between the Athletics and Cubs, but the squat Bruin clubber has come back this season to prove even more valuable to his team than Al Simmons has to the Athletics.

Wilson is hitting .344, some 35 points below Simmons' mark for the year, but he has set a new National League home run record, showing his heels even to Babe Ruth in this respect. Defensively, Wilson continues to cover a goodly share of the turf behind second base in Wrigley Field, having had 360 chances this season. At the same time Hack has not developed into the polished fielder most of his rivals are, and he has erred 15 times to trail all of the possible series center fielders, with a fielding mark of .958. However, unless the Bruin star runs afoul breaks similar to those he met last fall, it seems hardly likely that his mediocre defensive play can again offset his stellar slugging.

Mule Haas, of the Athletics, has slumped in his all-around play this season, and while he is still a capable gardener, he is not the outstanding performer he was a year ago. He is batting only .289 this season, and his hitting has not been as opportune as it was in 1929. However, he remains an excellent

Cleveland Wins, 7-5, Pounding MacFayden

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—The Cleveland Indians walloped the offerings of Danny MacFayden for seven runs in the first two innings today and then stood off Boston Red Sox threats to win 7 to 5 and clinch fourth place in the American League race.

Bushey and Durham turned the Indians back scoreless after the second, Bushey allowing four hits in five innings. Young Mel Harder got credit for the victory, although he was relieved during a three-run rally by Boston in the sixth, by Bean.

Walker Allows 2 Hits As Giants Beat Reds

New York, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—The Giants walloped Ray Kolp and Eppa Rixey today while Bill Walker pitched a two-hit shutout and won the first game of their final series with the Cincinnati Reds, 7 to 0. Walker had an easy time of it, allowing only a single by Swanson and a double by Cuccinello, while the Giants piled up ten blows, five of them coming in the fourth inning for as many runs. Six walks caused the only trouble for the Giant pitcher. He fanned three.

The one big inning, which drove Kolp from the mound, settled the game for the Giants. Mel Ott completed their triumph in the next inning by hitting a home run.

The victory gained no ground for the Giants, as St. Louis and Chicago also won. They remained five and one-half games behind the league-leading Cardinals, with only seven games to play.

Louisville Clinches Association Pennant

Louisville, Mo., Sept. 19 (A.P.).—The 1930 American Association pennant was clinched for Louisville today by Kansas City's 6-3 victory over St. Paul. Louisville lost to Indianapolis, 9-7, but the outcome left the Colonels sure of the flag by half a game, even if they lose their remaining two games and St. Paul takes its remaining three.

A's Not Great Yet, Says Mack

Manager Praises the Hurling of Grove and Earnshaw.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—Connie Mack, who sits on top of the baseball world, is not yet ready to say positively that he has a great ball club.

"In interviews printed here today on winning his eighth American League pennant in Chicago yesterday, the master tactician of the world's champion Athletics, said that he has always maintained that no team is entitled to call itself great unless it repeats.

"By that I mean," said Mack, "we won a pennant and a world series last year. We've won the flag again and if we take the series then my boys deserve to be ranked as a great team."

Praises Grove and Earnshaw.

"I would not attempt to pick out any player for high honors," continued the 68-year-old manager. "I'm entirely satisfied with every one, but I do want to praise Lefty Grove for his remarkable pitching. Earnshaw, too, deserves lots of credit."

In appreciation of the earnest work of Grove and Catcher Cochrane, Mack said, he has permitted them to return home instead of staying with the team for the St. Louis series in the West. Max Bishop, who has an injured leg, also has been sent home.

The manager of the A's will now turn his attention to the world series. "Right now we will begin to find out all we can about the St. Louis Cardinals," he said. "That looks like the team we will have to beat in the series."

Yankees Pound Lyons And Beat Chisox, 18–9

Chicago, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—Driving Ted Lyons from the mound with six runs in the first inning, the New York Yankees won a wild slugging game from the White Sox today by a score of 18 to 9. Chapman, Gehrig and Reynolds hit home runs and there were numerous other extra-base blows among the 21 collected by the Yanks and Chicago's 13.

Braxton, who followed Lyons, was hit even harder, but lasted until the eighth, when young Wilbur Wehde took his place. Roy Sherid made a great start, giving the Sox only three hits in the first six innings, but he weakened in the seventh and gave four runs, and finally retired in favor of Holloway in the ninth, when Chicago scored five more times.

Gehrig's homer was his fortieth of the season and was made off Wehde in the last inning.

CUBS DEFEAT BRAVES BY 5-4 SCORE

Hartnett's Double and Kelly's Single Win Game in 9th.

BOSTON, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—"Long George" Kelly and Gabby Hartnett, two baseballers who were figured to be all washed up a year ago, gave the Cubs a close 5-to-4 victory over Boston's Tribesmen here today to keep the Chicagoans in the chase for the National League pennant. Hartnett's double in the ninth and Kelly's hot single following it pushed over the winning run for Joe McCarhty's outfit.

The Cubs gathered a 4-run lead in the first two innings. In the first, Blair doubled, English tripled and then scored on Wilson's infield out.

In the second, the firm of Hartnett and Kelly produced singles, Lester Bell forced out Hartnett, but Blair beat out an infield hit, English walked and Cuyler walked, to bring in two more counters. The Braves scored in the third on Maguire's triple and Frankhouse's infield out, and in the fourth Welsh was scored by Spohrer's double.

The Braves tied things up in the seventh when they chased Teachout to the dugout. Neun's single and the doubles of Maranville and Clark did the work. Blake took Teachout's place and held the Braves in hand until Kelly and Hartnett went to work in the final frame.

Hafey's Double With Bases Loaded Is Decisive Blow.

Klein's Two Homers Account for Phils' Three Tallies.

Birds put on a five-run rally at the expense of Phil Collins, ace of the Philly Hurling staff, and clinched the victory.

George Fisher, batting for Pitcher Jess Haines, pried open the rally with a scratch single. Collins hit Douthit with a pitched ball. He nearly escaped trouble when Adams, attempting to sacrifice, forced Fisher at third and Frisch filed out to Brickell. Collins, however, hit another batsman, bottomley, to fill the bases and Chick Hafey put the Cards in the lead with a double. Pinkey Whitney, Philly third sacker, got his hand on the ball, but it tore on through.

Watkins followed with a single off Thompson's shins, which scored bottomley and Mancuso sent Hafey and Watkins across the plate with the fourth and fifth runs of the inning with a booming double to the center field wall. This ended the scoring.

Klein's two homers, his 37th and 38th of the season, were responsible for all the runs made by the Phillies and caused a few anxious moments for the league leaders by starting Philadelphia off in the lead. The slugging right fielder hammered out his first four-bagger in the first inning with Friberg on base. His second round trip was made in the fourth with the bases empty and gave the Phils a 3 to 1 lead.

The Cards got their first run in the fourth on Watkins' triple and Mancuso's sacrifice fly and their second in the sixth when bottomley and Watkins hit doubles.

The Cardinals played brilliantly in the field, turning in four effective double plays. Watkins led the sluggers, driving out two singles, a double and a triple, scored two runs and batted in two more.

Finazzo Loses In Exciting Contest

Capacity Crowd of 1,200 Sees Benefit Program.

THE initial benefit card for the Alexandria Day Nursery, sponsored by the Alexandria Rotary Club and the Alexandria Athletic Association, was a marked success, according to the plaudits of the packed house present at the armory in the Virginia town last night. The headline bout, between the home idol, "Baker Boy" Billy Schwartz, and the durable Baltimore Italian, and conqueror of Eddie Smallwood, Joe Finazzo, was the prize offering of a long card, with all eight rounds packed full of intense action.

Schwartz opened up an early advantage by a vicious third round attack, which had the tough little Baltimorean hanging on the ropes. The Alexandrian maintained his advantage through the fifth, but in the final three rounds, Finazzo began to cut down Schwartz's early lead, and both boxers were going strong at the finish. Schwartz weighed in at 17, while Finazzo weighed 9 pounds less.

40 Candidates Report For Susquehanna Team

Selinsgrove, Pa., Sept 13.—Susquehanna University inaugurated its 1930 football season Thursday, when about forty candidates reported to Coach "Bill" Ullery. The list of forty left over from last year's squad was augmented by twenty freshmen. Lew Harper, a lineman from U. of P., will assist Ullery and will have charge of the line candidates.

The back field will be the coaches' biggest problem this season. No less than five backs from last year's team have either graduated or will not return to school this year. Wall and Wormley have graduated, Malasky will not be able to participate in athletics, having just undergone an appendicitis operation, while Wagner and Danks will not return to school. (Reg. U. S. Patent Office.)

—Lincoln Fields Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

FOURTEEN juveniles are entered in the Dearborn Handicap at Lincoln Fields today with several prominent candidates for 2-year-old honors in the Midwest. The featur carries an added value of $5,000 and will be contested over the 7-furlong distance. FRIGATE BIRD, J. N. Camden's smart youngster, has shown speed in trials and has had the advantage of a brief rest.

Although the Camden juvenile must break from the outside, he should overcome this disadvantage to gain the honors. OSWEGO, the Gallagher & Coombs colorbearer, has turned in several brilliant victories over this track and should take the place. POLINOS, a stablemate of FRIGATE BIRD, should account for the minor award.

The secondary feature on the weekend program, the Valley Brook Country Club, has brought out five smart 3-year-olds and upward, to contest the $1,500 purse at the mile distance. J. N. Camden may take both features, as ELLICE appears best of the four named to start. A winner of several races and a sharp filly, she should romp off to an easy victory with the light impost of 104 pounds. SUITOR, E. J. Lehman's 4-year-old, finished behind ELLICE in their last meeting and should finish in the same order. JEM appears outclassed in this field, but should save the show position of the purse.

FIRST RACE—Sixteen 3-year-olds and upward will line up at the barrier in the opening dash over the six furlong distance. TOMBEREAU, from S. Peabody's stable, has disappointed in recent races but appears well suited here and should take down the prize. GOLD MINT, highly regarded in his recent efforts, may furnish the opposition, although the top one appears best. PERCENTAGE is favored over the others for show.

SECOND RACE—The largest field of the day with nineteen 2-year-olds will contest the $1,200 purse of the second race over the six-furlong sprint. RUNNING GIRL has been training well and appears best of a fair lot. COUSIN DOLL, the C. Nuckols juevnile, has shown speed in her races and may save the place. VALEDICTORY will hold the others safe.

FOURTH RACE—Seven have been named to start in the Avalon Park, the fourth race on the card, to battle for the $1,300 purse. The conditions call for 3-year-olds and upward over the six-furlong distance. LADY FINGERS, a clever 3-year-o. filly from the Gallagher & Coombs barn, has turned in some scintillating trials and appears to be the solid selection. ZACAWEISTA, from the Three D's Stable, has been overmatched in his recent races and seems well placed here. HOT SHOT, a fleet colt in tne H. P. Headley outfit, has shown speed in most of his races and should earn the minor award.

SIXTH RACE—Another large field of platers will start in the sixth race when eighteen 3-year-olds and upward strive for the major portion of the $1,200 purse over the mile and a sixteenth route. COCKRILL, a consistent performer at this track, has only to run back to his recent efforts to account for the prize. MASTER ACE will furnish keen opposition and may upset the figures. IRENE T appears best of the others.

SEVENTH RACE—In the closing race of the card, twelve 3-year-olds and upward have been entered to contest the $1,200 purse over the mile and a sixteenth course PRETTY POSE has shown staying qualities in recent starts and should capture the honors. DON FERNANDO, winner of his last start, is moving up a notch, but should take the place BROADAXE is favored for the show.

QUANTICO ELEVEN DEFEATS JOHN CARROLL, 14-0

Early Scores Decisive in Contest

Gotko Breaks Away for 48-Yard Dash to Score.

Special to The Washington Post.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 19.—Smashing their way through the John Carroll defense in a series of long runs, the Quantico Marines scored two touchdowns early in the initial period and trounced the Blue Streaks, 14 to 0, here tonight in a football game played under the footlights. . . .

Gotko Runs 48 Yards To Score.

The Marines outplayed Carroll during the remainder of the game, but the Streak line stiffened when its goal was threatened and there was no additional scoring.

Carroll carried the ball down to the Marine 2-yard line in the final period, but Culotta fumbled and Standley recovered within a yard of the Marine goal line.

The Carroll ends and backs fumbled repeatedly and seldom had possession in Marine territory.

Voight, MacZees Hurt In G. U. Grid Practice

Special to The Washington Post.

Point Lookout, Sept. 19.—Two more members of the Georgetown University football squad joined the hospital list today as a result of this afternoon's strenuous practice. Bill MacZees, half back, injured a hip, while Walter Voight, who has been showing up well in the battle for a tackle post, hurt a shoulder.

Voight's injury may keep him out of action for a week or ten days, as it is feared that one of the nerves in his shoulder has been harmed, but MacZees should not lose much time because of his hurt.

Final scrimmage for the training camp season is scheduled for tomorrow, as the Hilltoppers pull up stakes here Monday morning and head for home.

Jockey Gives Cops Tip; They Are Now Broke

Evanston, Ill., Sept. 19 (A.P.).—It seems ridiculous to suspect Jockey Johnny Owen of trying to spoof the police, but there is a widespread suspicion today to that effect.

The jockey was arrested for parking where he shouldn't. He submitted willingly to arrest.

"I understand perfectly," he said to the policemen. "You gentlemen are only doing your duty. To show you I'm a 'right guy,' I'll give you a tip. Honey Locust to win the fourth at Lincoln Fields."

"It is a shame," one officer remarked toanother, "to have to arrest such a nice little fellow. And him giving us that nice tip on Honey Locust."

So they bet various sums on the nag monickered Honey Locust. And the nag came puffing in second. And the policemen lost their money.

SKINKERS VS. PALISADES.

The Skinker Brother Eagles Nine will meet the reorganized Palisade A. C. Team today on the Skinker Field at 3 o'clock. Tomorrow, the Eagles travel to Alexandria to meet the St. Mary's Celtics in the first game of a double-header, starting at 2 o'clock.

CHICAGO U. BEATS JAPS.

Osaka, Japan, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—The University of Chicago handed Waseda University a 6 to 4 defeat today in a 10-inning baseball game here.

Dixie Pigs Battle Eagles At Mt. Rainier Tomorrow

Capital City League Play-Off Rivals Forced to Shift Game; Takoma Tigers Play Bausermans at Silver Spring.

THE Mount Rainier field, on Bladensburg road, will be the scene of tomorrow's clash between the Dixie Pigs and the Anacostia Eagles in the Capital City League play-off series for the unlimited championship. The game was originally scheduled for the Byrd Stadium, but the University of Maryland is making repairs to that diamond which has forced the shift.

This clash between the Prince Georges County and District section champions will start at 3 o'clock. There is no change in the time or field for the Takoma Tiger and Bauserman Motor Co. game. The battle between the Montgomery County and Virginia section champions is scheduled for the Silver Spring diamond, at the District line on Georgia avenue, starting at 2:30 o'clock.

As the result of defeats last Sunday, the Dixie Pigs and Bausermans will have their backs to the wall tomorrow. Another setback will mean the elimination of the defeated teams. On the other hand, should the Pigs and Bausermans win tomorrow, the series will be all even.

Some of the snappiest baseball of the season is expected in these two battles. Last Sunday, the intersectional play brought out a pair of exciting battles, the Eagles defeating Bauserman, 3-2 and the Tigers downing the Dixie Pigs, 7-3.

Considine Gains Semifinals In Wardman Tournament

The four who have survived the field of 64 clash today to decide the names of the two who will on Sunday fight it out for the Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson Trophy. Mitchell, seeded No. 1 and defending champion, will match his heavy artillery against Bill Seidel, George Washington University mainstay, whose play this week has stamped him as one of the most promising of the younger players in Washington.

Mangan Favored Over Considine.

Tom Mangan is something of a favorite over Bob Considine, whom he plays today at 2:30 o'clock in the other semifinal match. Mangan has been playing at the top of his steady backcourt game, while Considine's play this week has been extremely erratic, his forehand drive being almost wholly nonexistent.

Yesterday's feature match was the semifinal loss of Mrs. Ruth Martinez, seeded No. 1 in the draw, to Frances Walker. Miss Walker registered the outstanding upset of the women's tourney only after one of the hardest fought matches of the season. The scores, 6—3, 3—6, 6—3, tell of the evenness of the battle. Miss Walker's skidding chops turned victory her way when it looked as though Mrs. Martinez' back-court driving attack was going to prevail.

Sendel and Staubly Win in Doubles.

The strong men's doubles team of Maurice O'Neill and Deane Judd went down in defeat before the fierce attack of Frederico Sendel and Alan Staubly by the scores of 6—4, 8—10, 8—6. The Mexican Davis Cup alternate and the George Washingtonian went on to defeat Frank Shore and Anthony Latona in another three-set, hard-stroking affair.

Miss Josephine Dunham rules favorite over Miss Walker today when the two meet in the finals of the women's event. Miss Dunham defeated Miss Walker in the finals of the City of Washington championship this spring in straight sets. Miss Walker has improved in the interim, but Miss Dunham remains the favorite.

Men's doubles—Second round—Mangan and Considine defeated Heiskell and Burwell, 6—1, 6—1; Sendel and Staubly defeated O'Neill and Judd, 6—4, 8—10, 8—6.

Third round—Mitchell and Buchanan defeated Becker and Chase, 6—1, 6—1; Sendel and Staubly defeated Shore and Latona, 2—6, 7—5, 6—3; Considine and Mangan defeated Mills and Taylor, 6—1, 6—3.

TODAY'S SCHEDULE.

Pro, 18, Leading Field In St. Louis Open

Sunset Hill Country Club, St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 19 (A.P.).—Ralph Guldahl, an 18-year-old professional from Dallas, Tex., stole the spotlight of a great par-breaking act in the first performance of the $10,000 open golf championship at Sunset Hill today.

The tall Texan circled the water-spliced course with a spectacular 66, an even half-dozen strokes under par, and one stroke lower than the totals turned in by two of the outstanding favorites of the show, Tommy Armour, of Detroit, and "Light Horse Harry" Cooper, of Chicago, who finished second.

So one-sided was the attack on par today that six landed among the sixties; four more shot 70s and four more shot 71s, while seven more equaled perfect 72s.

Ed Dudley, Wilmington, Del., professional; Abe Espinosa, Chicago, and Eddie Williams, of Cleveland, were the other trio to land in the cherished sixties—each bagging a 69.

Louisiana State Plays South Dakota Today

Atlanta, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—Louisiana State's battle with South Dakota Wesleyan at Baton Rouge tomorrow ushers in the first of Dixie's many intersectional football challenges this year and tops the South's opening day program of twelve contests.

Two games of paramount interest in the Carolinas find Joss Cody's Clemson Bengals pitted against Presbyterian College and Billy Laval's fast and tricky South Carolina Game Cocks facing Erskine.

In the Old Dominion, Virginia and Washington and Lee, Conference squads, play Roanoke and Randolph Macon at Charlottesville and Lexington, respectively.

Title hopes of a quartet of I. A. A. teams flutter in the breeze as the Citadel tackles Stetson at Charleston, S. C., and Wofford meets Newberry at Spartanburg.

Chattanooga, I. A. A. champions for two years, starts its fall campaign against Murfreesboro Normal at Chattanooga; Howard faces Marion Institute at Birmingham; Davidson plays its annual contest with Elon at Davidson, and Emory and Henry opposes Guilford in a night game at Emory, Va.

St. Joseph to Play Fredericksburg Team

The St. Joseph's A. C. Nine, 1929 Capital City League champions and among the leaders this season, will travel to Fredericksburg, Va., tomorrow to meet the strong Elks Nine. Either Schneider or Farrington will do the pitching for St. Joe. Manager Cinotti wants his players to get in touch with him at 521 Third street northeast today.

WILSON RATED BEST OF CENTER FIELDERS

fielder, and he may regain the batting eye that made him one of the heroes of the last series.

Taylor Douthit, of the Cards, has been tested under World's Series fire, and not found wanting. He is the same steady performer he was two years ago, fielding well, hitting just a notch above .300, and continuing to be one of the outstanding lead-off hitters in the business.

The remaining possibilities, Johnny Frederick, Ethan Allen, and Wally Roettger, are comparative newcomers, none of them having tasted World's Series competition, although Roettger was a Card in 1923.

Of the trio, Frederick, of the Robins, has amassed the better records. Frederick, a lead-off man, has scored 118 runs, to say nothing of his batting average of .333. He is somewhat of a slugger, too, having collected 43 doubles, 11 triples, and 17 homers among his 204 hits.

The Giant pair, Allen and Roettger, who have been alternating in center for McGraw, while both capable players, suffer in comparison with their rivals. Neither of them is hitting .300, although Allen is just 4 points shy of the charmed circle, and both are steady fielders.

DEBUT TODAY FOR VIRGINIA ELEVENS

Special to The Washington Post.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Sept. 19. Virginia's 1930 football season opens tomorrow afternoon, some 40-odd hours before classes at the university get under way. As there was no scrimmage yesterday and none this afternoon, undergraduates will witness a match game before having an opportunity to see the squad in action.

Tomorrow's contest with Roanoke College will mark the opening of the forty-third grid season at Jefferson's university. Ten games are listed for the season, the climax to come in the annual Thanksgiving Day battle with the University of North Carolina, to be staged here.

The Cavalier squad has been working faithfully since Monday, September 1, two workouts being held daily, morning and afternoon. The last scrimmage was held Wednesday afternoon. Practices yesterday and today were comparatively light and the rest was welcomed by members of the squad, who have encountered some of the hottest weather ever experienced in these parts.

Tentative Lineup Announced.

This team is lighter than last year's combination. Only two men on the squad tip the scales at over 200 pounds. These are Capt. Hunter Motley and Herbert Bryant. The remainder are well under 190. Four letter men are in the line-up, three reserves of last season and four from last year's freshman team.

During the past three weeks Earl Abell, head coach, has been helped with the linemen by Joe McConnell, while Gus Tebell, the back field coach, has had as his assistants Roy Randall and Johnny Sloan.

Handley High Meets Tech Eleven in Opener

Winchester, Va., Sept. 19.—Handley High School gridmen will inaugurate the football season here September 27 by engaging Tech High School, Washington, D. C., four times champions of the District of Columbia in seven years.

Coach John Parsons, a former Tech player, said he realized what an aggregation his team has to face, but he expects to have a first-class team on the field from the 31 now trying for berths. Most of Handley's games will be with teams of the Cumberland Valley Athletic League.

Navy's Starting Eleven Will Be Named Soon

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 19.—With the opening of the Naval Academy football season two weeks ahead, the coaches any day now expect to decide upon the line-up to face William and Mary in the opener. Coach Navy Bill Ingram, however, is taking the initial game in stride for the invasion of South Bend on October 11 to help Notre Dame dedicate its new stadium.

For two seasons in a row Navy has lost to the Irish by one touchdown and the Tars are hopeful of having a pony team reverse the proceedings this year. Hard scrimmage again marked the daily drill, with Denny, last year's plebe quarter back, directing the plays.

Fishburne Will Start Grid Training Today

Special to The Washington Post.

Waynesboro, Va., Sept. 19.—Fishburne Military School will open its football practice tomorrow with what is believed to be the strongest coaching staff it has had in recent years in chanrge. "Babe" Spotts, former Washington and Lee sensation, will again direct the Garnet and Gold pigskin forces, but he will be ably assisted by Chadwick, V. M. I. tackle of last year, and Pattie, who starred with V. P. I. as an end.

While Turner, Martin, Dutrow and Tompkins are the only football letter men from last year who are returning, there is considerable new material on hand which looks good. Among these are Branaman, Logh, Holdren, Warburton, Mattox, Chipman, Glenn, Hicks and Glover. In addition to these, the coaches are expecting much from some of last year's cadets, namely, Short, Crannwell, Sackett, Ginsberg and Moore. The cadets play their opening game here with Randolph-Macon Academy on October 4.

Four D. C. High Teams Play Swavely Eleven

Manassas, Va., Sept. 19.—Gonzaga, Business and Tech, of Washington; Georgetown Prep, of Garrett Park, Md., and Episcopal High, of Alexandria, are among the schools having places on the eight-game football schedule of the Swavely School for the season's campaign. This year's schedule is one of the hardest a Swavely eleven ever tackled.

Business High will open the season here on October 2; Episcopal High, October 25, at Alexandria; Gonzaga, November 7, at Washington; Georgetown Prep, here November 15, and Tech High here Thanksgiving Day.

A large squad reported to Gendell Reeves, head coach, today, and, with a number of last season's men back and some likely looking new material on hand, Coach Reeves, though noncommittal, seemed impressed with the prospects for a strong team.

The Swavely schedule:

October 3, Business High, Manassas; 11, St. Christopher's School, Manassas; 18, Randolph-Macon Academy, Front Royal; 25, Episcopal High School, Alexandria.

November 1, Shenandoah Valley Academy Manassas; 7, Gonzaga High School, Washington; 15, Georgetown Prep, Manassas; 27, Technical High School, Manassas.

CHANGE SEEN IN AMERICA CUP RULES

Future Challenge by British Hinge on New Clause.

By TOM HORGAN.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 19 (A.P.). The future of international yacht racing was believed tonight to rest with a meeting which will be held at New York next Wednesday by the New York Yacht Club, holder of the America's cup.

After Sir Thomas Lipton's fifth consecutive defeat in his quest for the famous trophy, emblematic of international yachting supremacy, yachtsmen, both British and American, were in general agreement that unless the terms of competition were changed the probability of another challenge for the cup is extremely vague.

The four straight victories of Enterprise, skippered by Harold S. Vanderbilt, over Shamrock V, sailed by Capt. Ned Heard, which were concluded yesterday, showed conclusively that the challenger was hopelessly outclassed.

Enterprise Within Rules.

Under the present rules, challenger and defender must conform to the same specifications in hull construction, but they are given entire liberty above decks. This permitted Enterprise to carry a light hollow metal mast and a much lighter boom than were used by Shamrock. Representatives of the British Yacht Racing Association and the International Yacht Racing Union, who will attend Wednesday's meeting, are eager to have rules adopted guaranteeing a minimum in weight of rigging.

Reports were in circulation about Newport today that the British Royal Yacht Squadron had already lodged a challenge for a race next year for the America's Cup. There was reason to believe that such a challenge was under consideration by British yachtsmen, but it was also understood they would await the result of Wednesday's conference before deciding to make another bid for the famous cup.

Sir Thomas Delays Decision on Boat.

Sir Thomas was also waiting to learn what decisions might be made before deciding on the Shamrock's future. If the holders of the cup agree to rig future cup boats as sturdily as the British challenger, the aged Irish baronet is expected to retain possession of the green sloop and take her home to the Green Isle. She may even make the return Atlantci crossing before snow falls, although his present crew has little relish for the voyage. Another crew of course could easily be obtainable. But if no changes in specifications are made, Shamrock may remain an ex patriate, as has been the case with his other unsuccessful challengers.

The representatives of the British yachting organizations are eager to have the Enterprise and the three unsuccessful American Cup candidates, Yankee, Weetamoe and Whirlwind, cross the Atlantic and race again next summer against British sloops of the "J" class. Invitations have already been issued and John Lawrence, of Boston, head of the Yankee syndicate, has indicated his willingness to participate in such contests.

It is for such a purpose that Sir Thomas would take Shamrock home.

Miss Hicks, the defending champion, shot the most phenomenal golf of her career to eliminate Ada Mackenzie, of Toronto, three-time champion, 7 and 6, while Miss Orcutt defeated the steady and consistent Detroit player, Mrs. Harlan Higbie, 5 and 3.

A crowd of 1,500 saw Miss Hicks shoot a sensational 35 on the first nine, one under men's par for the course of the laval Sur-le-lac Club. The Hewlett youngster did not lose a hole on the first nine and turned seven up on her redoubtable opponent. She went eight up at the tenth, lost the eleventh but halved the twelfth to end the match.

300-Mile Speed Expected Of Racer Now in Making

Motors, With Twice Power of Seagrave's, Completed by De Paolo and Fengler for Trials at Daytona Beach in February.

By PAUL ZIMMERMAN.

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Sept. 19 (A. P.).—Two giant motors, designed to hurl a racing car across the sands of Daytona Beach, Fla., at the almost unbelievable speed of 300 miles an hour, are resting on blocks in a manufacturing plant here, awaiting construction of a chasis to carry them.

Molded into the steel of these two 24-cylinder, double-ignition power units are the dreams of two veteran drivers of the Nation's speedways, Harlan Fengler and Peter de Paolo, who hope next February to eclipse the late Maj. Segraves' world record of 231.36 miles per hour.

While the chassis and body will follow generally accepted designs to cut down air resistance and insure stability, the power hookup will be something of a departure from anything prevously tried in record attempts.

Power Twice That of Seagrave Racer.

The machine will be the most powerful ever built for Daytona Beach speed tests. Each motor will develop 1,200 horsepower, the combined power of which will be more than twice that in Maj. Segraves' racer. The craft will be of four-wheel drive design, which mode of driving, veteran pilots point out, will eliminate in great degree slippage, which tends to cut down speed. Ordinary water-cooling will be used, tests having shown no need of ice packing.

The machine will be approximately 32 feet long, sufficient to carry the twin motors and give the driver cramped room for himself and his controls. When completed the car will weigh 5 tons. Instead of silk casings for the wheels as used by Major Segrave, twelve-ply cotton fabric tires with thin rubber tread have been tetsed and proved sufficient to stand the strain of the tremendous speed.

Pilot Not Yet Selected.

De Paolo and Fengler hope to have the machine assembled by late December and on the Daytona sands by January 15 for preliminary tests. Just who will pilot the race has not been decided.

De Paolo has not been a racing driver since 1922, winning the national driving championship in 1925. Fengler was injured in a race at Indianapolis in 1923, and after that never again appeared on the speedway.

Old Dominion and Potomac Crews Seek McKinney Cup

THE annual competition between the Old Dominion and Potomac Boat Clubs for the William C. McKinney Memorial Trophies will take place on the upper Potomac today beginning at 2:30 o'clock. Finishes in all races will be off the Potomac Club's pier. Three championship events, with memorial awards at stake, will be run off—singles, sculls, four-oared gigs and quadruple sculls.

Singles scus will be the outstanding event of the day with the main trophy and the title of "Champion of the Potomac" to be awarded the winner. Granville Gude, nationally known bladesman, is favored to win the singles contest. He carries Potomac's colors.

If Gude fails, the odds still favor Potomac over Old Dominion. Besides Donoghue and Naylor, while Old Dogude, Potomac has entered Scannell, minion is relying wholly upon Betton in this event.

Old Dominion's four-oared gig will be powered by Monroe, Trout, Gensmer and Grisner, with Whitton keeping time. In Potomac's boat will be Scannell, Nutwell, Shaw and Naylor, with Prettyman as coxwain.

Gude will appear in Potomac's quadruple scull along with Scannell, Stewart and Marden. The Old Dominion boat will be manned by Bell, Gorman, Betton and Whiteston.

A novice singles will be held for those who have never won a singles race. Canoe tipping, swimming and diving exhibitions by Cliff Sanford, Florence Skadding and others are also scheduled.

PIN LEAGUE ATTRACTS 10 TEAMS

Rejuvenated Capital Ladies League to Open Oct. 7.

AN entirely rejuvenated Washington Ladies Duckpin League, with ten representative teams of good to excellent women bowlers will get under way Tuesday night, October 7, on the newly renovated Coliseum Alleys, Ninth street and Pennsylvania avenue. The league will operate on a 27-set schedule, with 100 tangible prizes, donated by local merchants, augmenting the usual bowling league cash prize list.

The Washington Ladies Duckpin League, senior feminine bowling organization of the District, for one reason or another, has not fared so well the past two seasons. However, this year, with such active prominent women bowlers as Bronson Quaites, Bess Hoffman, Rena Levy and several others behind the league, assisted by George Eismann, secretary of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress, it seems the league has taken a new lease on life.

Disbandment Predicted Month Ago.

The work of these leaders in whipping together ten teams, five of which are new to the loop, is phenomenal, especially as only a month ago it was feared that the league would not be active this season.

The ten teams which will constitute the Coliseum's bid for prominence in feminine duckpin circles this season are the Columbians, last year winners, led by Rena Levy, first ranking feminine bowler in the District; the Beeques, runners-up last season, with Bronson Quaites, founder of the league, at the helm; the Hilltoppers, captained by Edna Ragan; Daughters of Isabella, with May Morgan captain; Bess Hoffman's Shamrocks; a brand new team from the War Department, captained by Elizabeth Purdy; Helen Crouch's new team, the Cardinals; a team from the Veterans' Bureau, in charge of Alice Lauer; Hyattsville Lady Stars, probably with Mrs. George Eismann, wife of the National Duckpin secretary, as captain, and Polly Shughrue's Merchants Quintet, undecided as to its team name.

STOCK PRICES BREAK UNDER SALES' WAVE

2,947,000 SHARES SOLD

New York, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—The stock market broke through the traces today under the pressure of the heaviest selling since around the middle of August, when nervousness over the drought was at its height.

At the close the price index of 90 leading issues was off 3 points, the largest break since August 12. Sales totaled 2,947,000 shares, more than double yesterday's volume and the most substantial turnover since early last month.

The shorts, who were active at the opening and through the early dealings, derived unexpected support from an unfounded rumor to the effect that serious political disturbances either had started or were about to start in Germany, threatening the present government. This report, denied as quickly as the cables could carry a denial, spread rapidly throughout the financial district and offerings, both from the bears and from the alarmed holders who had purchased at higher levels, increased rapidly, with the result that turnover in the first two hours exceeded that for any full day this week with the exception of Monday.

Extreme Losses Reduced.

When concern over the German situation had been quieted trading slackened, but the bear drive had gathered such momentum that prices continued to slip lower. The market turned dull on intermittent attempts at a rally. Sporadic covering at the close reduced some of the extreme losses of 3 to 9 points, but net declines of 3 to 5 were numerous.

The break, which punctured by a considerable margin the so-called resistance points at which stocks had been meeting support, gave evidence of the unsettled state of speculative sentiment, of the concern in some quarters over the failure of business to revive appreciably and of the market's recent inability to carry through on the rallies.

Selling was especially active in the steel and utility shares, although large blocks, ranging from 5,000 to 8,000 shares of a miscellaneous assortment were offered. U. S. Steel slumped to 162¾ and closed at 163½, off 3⅛. Youngstown Sheet & Tube, Michigan Steel, American Rolling Mill and Republic Steel all touched new lows for the year.

Business News Negative.

The day's business news was largely negative. Copper producers finally cut to 10½ cents and the exporters did likewise. There were some unfavorable dividend actions, notably by Magma Copper, Park & Tilford and Dunhill International, although one extra and one increased disbursement were announced.

Summaries of the week in trade varied little from recent statements. Dun's said "the present slow and highly uneven advance closely conforms with conservative expectations," but added there was ground for the statement that "some progress in the right direction has been achieved since the recent turn in seasons." Bradstreet's reported that trade news this week was a repetition of recent advices of "a continued moderate increase in fall purchasing," although warm weather in some sections had retarded buying.

Conditions in the money market remained extremely comfortable and there was no change from recent rates. Bonds, with the exception of foreign issues, were steady.

Grain Prices Weakened.

Grain prices weakened, and, although the declines were doubtless accelerated by the stock market's action, quotations tended to ease before the decline in shares became broad. Wheat lost 1⅜ to 1⅝ cents, and corn 1⅛ to 1½. Cotton closed 7 to 11 points net lower.

Net losses on the Stock Exchange ranged from 5 to 8 points in Western Union, Columbian Carbon, Case, American Power & Light, Allied Chemical, Underwood - Elliott-Fisher, Worthington Pump and Westinghouse Electric. In the 3 to 4 point group were American Can, Eastman Kodak, Stone & Webster, Loew's, Du Pont, Electric Power & Light and Lambert. Sears Roebuck, Bethlehem Steel, American Telephone, Johns-Manville, American Water Works and Standard Gas lost 2 or more. General Electric, General Motors and Standard Oil of New Jersey were steadier, yielding only about a point on the day. Weakness of Republic Steel, which lost 3 net, was accompanied by reports that the common dividend would be omitted.

Foreign exchanges were slightly irregular. The German mark held firm and the French franc made another small gain.

New York Egg Futures At 25⅝ Cents Dozen

New York, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—Egg futures broke a cent a dozen today on the New York Mercantile Exchange Clearing House, continuing a decline which in the past two weeks has carried prices down several cents.

Sales today aggregated 214 cars, or about 31,000,000 eggs, of refrigerator firsts for November delivery at 25 to 25⅝ cents; and 51 cars, of about 7,500,000 eggs, for December delivery at 25⅜ to 25¾ cents. Wholesalers said that the decline is unprecedented for this season, when the market usually advances because of a diminishing supply.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE.

UTILITY ISSUES RISE AS BOND SALES GAIN

GERMAN LIST DECLINES

New York, Sept. 19 (A.P.).—Uncertainty over the political situation in Germany brought a fresh wave of liquidation of foreign obligations in the listed bond market today, and raised the level of activity to the highest point in two months. Sales totaled $10,453,000, the best since July 11.

In large turnovers, German issues declined sharply, some to new lows for the year, and the reactionary trend unsettled the whole list of foreign bonds. The immediate cause of the selling was a wild rumor that Fascists contemplated seizing the German government, and while Berlin reported that the rumor had no foundation in fact, the liquidation showed no diminution.

More than a dozen German issues lost a point or more, and other European issues reacted in sympathy to a lesser degree. German International 5½s, offered last spring, became the most active bond on the exchange, dropping nearly 3 points and closing 2¼ net lower, a new bottom for the year.

Kreuger & Toll warrant 5s, the obligation of the Swedish match trust, which has extensive interests in Germany, reacted a point on a large turnover and regained a small fraction. Karstadt Rudolph 6s sold off 4 and Nuremberg 6s sank 6 to a new year's low. The German 7s, so-called Dawes issue, lost only ¾. South American issues were fairly steady, and good buying developed for Argentine 6s of October, 1959.

Some of the stock privilege bonds of domestic corporations were sold in sympathy with the trend of equity issues, but investment issues held on an even keel, some of the high-grade railroad and utility issues profiting from a good demand.

Utilities established a new high for the year in the averages. American Telephone debenture 5s repeated its previous high of the year. American & Foreign Power 5s were in demand. Columbia Gas & Electric 5s climbed to a new 1930 high. New peaks were also reached by Baltimore & Ohio To-ledo 4s, Boston & Maine 5s of 1967, Cotton Belt 1st 4s, Oregon Short Line 5s and Coast Line 4s.

U. S. Governments were steady. Liberty 3½s, the most active bond, was firm.

CAPITAL EXCHANGE SHOWS MORE LIFE

NEW PURCHASE IS CITED

Life flowed into the local stock exchange yesterday with the Washington Gas Light Co. as chief vitalizer. The gas company, however, does not deserve all the credit for this speculative rejuvenation, the real power behind the pick-up being the sale of the Alexandria municipal gas plant to the Seaboard Investment Trust.

This transaction has a direct effect on the Washington Gas Light Co. as the Seaboard Investment Trust holds stock of the local gas company bought by New York interests from the local owners. This stock does not exceed 20 per cent, in accord with the La Follette anti-merger act. But transcending this phase of the situation is the announcement that the Alexandria operation will be conducted in conjunction with the Washington, and that the sale will pave the way for a new by-product plant of the local gas company.

Gas Rates May Drop.

The results are far reaching. Gas rates are expected to be less severe in Washington, and it is definite that they will be far more liberal to the consumer in Alexandria. All this links up with the Washington Gas Co. and its stock. And what the money world thinks about it all is demonstrated by the local exchange.

Washington Gas stock and bonds have led all issues on the exchange this week, an exceedingly quiet one. Yesterday Washington Gas again came to the fore with the sale of seven bonds of 6s, series A. One $1,000 bond went at 103, while six $100 bonds were sold at 103. On these sales 103½ was asked and 102¾ was bid. The last sale of Washington Gas stock was 117½, the bid was 122 and 131 was asked.

Other Active Issues.

Other issues figuring in yesterday's sales were Washington Railway & Electric 4s, Barber & Ross, Inc., Capital Traction Co., Potomac Electric Co., Columbia National Bank and Merchants Transfer & Storage Co.

Washington led the United States for the amount of insurance sold in August, showing a gain of 13 per cent. Florida followed with a gain of 12 per cent and Maine ran third with a gain of 9 per cent.

Arthur C. Ketcham, formerly of the Wilmington office of Hemphill, Noyes & Co., is now associated with the Washington office of the same company. Mr. Ketcham was formerly assistant secretary of the Wilmington Trust Co.

ADVICE ON INVESTMENTS

By CHARLES W. STORM

Standard Brands; Petroleum Corp.

S. S.—Please give me any information you have in regard to Standard Brands and Petroleum Corporation of America. I am thinking of buying some shares in one of the other, or perhaps both, for a long pull.

Answer—Standard Brands reported earnings on stock for year 1929 of $1.37 a share. Estimated 1930 earnings are now placed at $1.25 a share. Dividends of 37½ cents quarterly, or $1.50 yearly, are paid. It is evident present dividend is not being earned. Consequently, stock lacks attractiveness from an investment viewpoint, at least until revenues recover substantially.

Petroleum Corporation of America is an investment trust specializing in oil securities. As of April 30, last, it had an unrealized loss of $4,390,175. This loss was partly offset by income from investments for first four months of 1930 of $1,378,878. Balance sheet as of April 30 showed cash and call loans of $10,686,478 and no funded debt. Liquidating value of stock on that date was $31.27. An initial quarterly dividend of 37½ cents was paid December 31, last, placing issue on a $1.50 yearly basis. Latest quarterly dividend of like amount was paid June 30. Last November company had $47,000,000 invested in stocks of Prairie Oil & Gas and Prairie Pipe Line Companies. Portfolio also includes stock of twenty other companies, embracing practically all principal corporations of Standard Oil group, total investments approximating $86,000,000. Stock regarded as at least a fairly attractive speculative investment, with added attraction because of merger possibilities.

Royalty Corporation.

Mrs. G. S.—I have a friend who highly recommended Royalty Corporation of America as an investment. Can you give me any information regarding this as an investment?

Answer—Considering that Royalty Corporation of America confines its activities to buying and selling royalties and leaseholds in various producing sections of the Mid-Continent Oil fields, and has no interest in drilling operations or development of producing properties, neither the 12 per cent participating preferred nor the common shares have any degree of investment value, even though dividends at the rate of $1.20 per share annually are paid on the participating preferred, in addition to which extra dividends are being disbursed on the issue, 60 cents extra having been paid thus far in 1930. No dividends whatsoever are being distributed on the common.

Evans Auto Loading.

L. J.—I have been advised to buy Evans Auto Loading, but before doing so I would like your opinion of it.

Answer — Inventories have been piling up, which is not a good sign. Earnings are expected to be unfavorably affected by readjustment of inventories. First half-year earnings equaled 41 cents a share, as against $2.32 for the same period last year.

It appears doubtful if the first half-year showing will be duplicated in the last six months. The fact that the company is harassed by inventories makes the stock hazardous speculation.

Davison Chemical; Graham-Paige.

V. K.—Have you any idea when Davison Chemical will pay dividends? What do you think of Graham-Paige?

Answer—It is up to directors to decide when they will order dividends. Judging by the earnings of $4 for the fiscal year recently closed, and the $3.34 per share income for the preceding fiscal period, directors should do something along this line in the near future.

This year's loss on Graham-Paige will probably be larger than last year. Graham-Paige earned 47 cents a share in 1928, which was offset by last year's loss. The stock is speculative.

MISS MYSTERIOUS

By LARRY LAWRENCE

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

A coed called Babe by her friends receives a letter from her guardian saying he has lost all her money and is going to commit suicide. He says that she is not Thelma Townley, as she has always believed. The shock forces Babe to a stern plan. She will earn her own way and learn her identity. This she tells to a friend, Violet Rimmel. A man, who says his name is Morgan, comes to her and proposes marriage, telling her he knows of her trouble. Babe suspects Morgan of being a crook. Pete Jones, Milwaukee, a senior, asks her to marry him. She turns him down. That night she is kidnaped by two men, Pete rescues her. They learn that the boss of the kidnapers is a man called the Duke. One is called Gus, the other "the runt." Babe sends Pete back to school, and stays in Milwaukee seeking a job. She learns that some one broke into her room at school and stole two old brooches. Weary and discouraged at her failure to get work, she is approached by a man named Mac, who offers her a mysterious job. She takes it. They go to a rooming hall, and Mac tells her to vamp a certain man. It proves to be Morgan. She goes with Morgan. He makes violent love, and Babe accidentally shoots him. Mac arrives, finds Morgan is not seriously wounded, searches his room, and finds the stolen brooches. Morgan leaves town. By comparing notes, Mac and Babe finds that they are both searching for the same man—Babe to learn her identity; Mac to get revenge. They are convinced it is Forseith, who has not committed suicide, but only used that dodge to escape enemies. To get a line on Forseith, Babe feigns amnesia, and appeals to police. She is put in a hospital, and Forseith tries to get her out of it. Pete and Vilet, seeing Babe's picture in papers, come to rescue and get her out of hospital. Mac realizes that he is in love with Babe, and Pete and Mac know they are rivals. Babe is worried because she loves them both. She fears there may be a taint inherited from her mother's parents. A doctor in her heart she is certain that her father was a brave man, and she fights to be like this ideal she holds of him. Mac goes to get The Runt, who has been shadowing them, and says he will return in 10 minutes, but is gone for more than an hour. Babe is frantic with worry.

She rents a car and drives to the resort region on the hunch that Forseith was hiding nearby. On entering a saloon and restaurant there Babe is told a man answering her description has come to a meal. Babe permits him to do so, and while talking he speaks of "old striped pants," which realizes means Forseith.

He attempts to make love, but Babe threatens him with an imaginary gangster husband. Mike drives to the hideout of the Duke, and while he is inside Babe attempts to creep to the house to see if she can learn anything about Mac. She fails, and is back hiding in the car when men come out seeking an intruder.

CHAPTER XXI.

"Look in the car, I said," the Boss yelled. Babe held her breath. Flattened on the bottom with the robe over her she did not move a muscle. She knew that Mike would not reveal her hiding place. It would involve him in too many explanations, but she feared some one would jerk the door open and grab her.

A man stepped on the running board. He stepped down. Her heart pounded like a trip hammer. Her game was over. She wanted to scream but her throat was dry, parched from fear. The door opened. Babe lay still as if dead. The man continued to stand beside the car. She could feel his presence. Then she heard his voice. It was Mike. He was calling, "No. Nobody here." Then he slammed the door and got into the front seat. Babe felt weak, all gone, but exultant for the moment. Again she heard Mike's voice, "Well, guess I'll pull out," she heard the starter grind, the motor turn over and felt the car start. Mike completed the circle and headed toward the rough trail. Babe breathed easier but did not dare move. Mike pushed the car as fast as he dared over that rutty road. He made turn after turn in the twisting path before he dared slow up to ask, "Are you all right?"

"Yes, I got out to look around and just as I did they turned a spotlight on." He stopped and she got into the front seat.

"Oh, that was it. You came near getting us both into plenty of trouble The Boss would just as soon put me on the spot as look at me if he thought I was bringing spies in here. He's loaded with TNT again and got the willies."

As they bounced and rattled over the road Babe began to feel safer for herself, but worry over Mac was increased by what Mike had said of the Boss.

"Oh, he's off on one of those long end runs of his. He won't hold his place as boss of that mob if he gets the creeps like that. He's going haywire. Some mug will give him six where it hurts one of these days and there'll be a new chief running the racket."

"Was anything special troubling him?"

"No, nothing to speak of. He just thinks some slug has got his name on it. That's all. And when you get to thinking that why some slug probably has."

"Did you see old Fancy Pants?"

Mike laughed at this question. It was the first indication he had given that he was getting over his scare.

"Yeah. Fancy Pants was there and some guy his men had brought in. From what little I heard Scareye was seething because they had brought him in. He seemed to think that if they wanted to get rid of him they should have taken him for a trip in some other direction."

Babe gave a little silent prayer of thanks. Mac was still alive. Her night's work had not been in vain.

"What did Fancy Pants have to say to the boss?" Babe asked.

"Oh, I just wondered."

"Well, I've already told you more than most molls ever heard. None of this stuff is dames' business."

"I know it. But I like to hear the dirt. What difference does it make? What can I do about anything?"

"Nothing, I guess, but be nosey and get in trouble. You came mighty near to curtains for us both back there. If the boss had started shooting. He does sometimes, too, when he's all loaded with liquor. Funny he didn't put a couple of shots through the car just for luck. And then where would you have been?"

"I guess I would have been out of the picture," Babe said, just to be answering. "But what has that got to do with it now? I got a right to wonder, haven't I?"

"That don't hurt you any if you don't go moving in on no trouble." Mike sulked a little. He drove in silence for a time. They were on the gravel road again. Babe's mind was measuring the problem from all its angles. She must get back to Milwaukee and get help if she were to storm the hideout. That might not be the best plan, anyway. Some one would certainly be killed if she did that. Could she give an alarm and deliberately get some one killed. No, certainly not. She did not know for sure that Mac would be killed even if he were left in Forseith's hands. But she did know that if she called on some one to help her there would be shooting, most likely death. If she called the sheriff and he sent a squad of men she felt sure some one would be killed.

"What would my father have wanted me to do?" she asked herself, and the answer was not long in coming. "Go it alone." She felt better at once. At any rate she would not drag others into her troubles, expose others to death because she was a foolish young girl and had already driven one man into danger. Of course, she had not been wholly responsible for Mac's danger, but while she lashed herself she insisted on taking all the blame.

"Nameless girl drives man she loves to death to satisfy whim." The phrase she framed sounded too much like headlines. She almost despised herself.

"Man she loves."

"But do I love him?" she asked herself.

"Well, whether I do or not, I suppose I must marry him if he wants to marry me—and he ever escapes. It was my fault." The will power that had carried her this far in the adventure was evaporating. She wanted to cry. And she felt then that she wanted to cry on Pete's shoulder. But her eyes were dry, burning. Her head throbbed.

"Oh, Mike, I am so tired and thirsty I was just resting." It was a lame excuse for her brooding and she knew it.

"But, Mike, I don't dare go in with you. People might see us together and—"

"Well, that's all right, ain't it? Plenty of people have already seen us together."

Babe didn't want Mike to see just how ragged and ripped her clothes were. She didn't want him to know how far she had gone in trying to get to the house.

"Yes, but, Mike, they saw us before you drove out to the place. If they should see us later and it got to the boss and they found my heel prints; well, you can see he would have you on the carpet right away."

Talking was helping Babe come out of her feeling of helplessness. A plan was forming. Not definite as yet, but this much she knew: She must get into other clothes. "Why, I wouldn't want to be found dead in these things," she told herself and then thought it was a grim sort of joke to bring up that bromidic expression at such a time.

"Mike, you can go in and get me a glass of beer, can't you?" she asked as sweetly as she could as they neared the saloon cafe.

"Sure, kid. I'll do that," he promised and got out of the car. Babe waited until he was inside and then she leaped from the car, got into her small rented one and started driving as if demons were after her. She was headed for Milwaukee and a change of costume. And as she drove she came to a resolution. She would return at once, drive into the hideout and face them. It was her duty and she would not shrink from it.

"Why not go now as you are?" The question came to bother her. But she drove on. A woman wants to look her best, even if going to a tryst with death. There was still time, she kept telling herself, trying to soothe her conscience.

Babe's eyes were drooping. She had to fight to keep awake. She looked at her watch. It was neary 2 o'clock in the morning. She had not rested since she left the hospital; her head bobbed, but instead of slowing down she put on speed, for she wanted to get to her room and prepare for a single-handed attack on a citadel full of gangsters. And she was too sleepy to keep her eyes open.

"Dad wouldn't have flinched," she said, and just then it happened. They say the age of miracles is past, but had any one been present to see what happened he would have sworn he saw a miracle. The light car swerved, took to the ditch and turned completely over and landing right-side up rolled for 100 feet in a field before it crashed into a fence and stopped. Babe lay crumpled up at the wheel, unconscious, a little stream of blood flowing from a wound in her head.

Nor was the fact that she still breathed the only miracle of that night. The roads were deserted. She might have stayed there for hours.

When Babe came to she looked up into Pete's face. Violet was standing beside him.

It was no miracle, of course, that Pete and Violet should be there, but it certainly seemed to Babe that nothing short of Providence could have worked so well. She sighed a weak sort of sigh, but a happy one, and then asked, "Where am I?" and Pete leaned over the bed and whispered, "Thank God."

Babe smiled. When she smiled it lighted up the darkened room. "That's no answer, Pete," she said, and then she had to wait a little while for strength before she could continue.

"I asked, 'where am I?'"

"But I have to bother, Pete," she said. "I can't stay here now. I have something to do. I——"

"You have to lie still. That's all you have to do."

"Pete, you always save me, don't you?"

"Go to sleep."

"Over my dead body," Pete blustered.

"Babe, you've talked enough. Shut your eyes now and rest for a while and then Pete and I will do whatever it is you think needs doing." Violet had taken command.

Babe nodded her head, closed her eyes and went into a deep slumber. She slept for four hours. When she awakened Violet was beside her with a cup of chicken broth.

"Drink this before you say a word," Violet commanded. The Babe was glad to take the order. She moved. Every bone ached.

"Where's Pete?" Babe asked.

"I don't know. He'll be back. He's been hanging around this bed for the last four hours. I had to drive him away."

"Good ol' Pete," Babe whispered. "Good ol' Pete! Now listen Vi, I'm going to talk as fast as I can. I don't want Pete to hear this. I have to get up and go after Mac. I've found where he is. Forseith has got him locked up in a gangster's lodge. It's my fault and I have to get him out, that's all there is to it."

"But I tell you, Vi, it's life or death. I think Forseith is crazy. I know the gangster is. It may be too late now but I have to go. If he is dead I have killed him. If he is still alive—I have to go."

Efforts of the Police Department, aided by J. Herbert Taylor, chief of the identification bureau of the Navy Department, to establish the identity of the two young men found dead on top of a freight car which arrived in the Potomac freight yard Thursday night, have so far proved unavailing. Coroner T. Marshall Jones announced yesterday that he would not hold an inquest, since there were no witnesses available, and it was evident that the men were not killed in Alexandria.

The police description of the men follows:

No. 1—White, apparently between 25 and 30 years old; 5 feet 9 inches tall; auburn hair; fair complexion; clean shaven, right little finger crooked; small scar on bridge of nose; small scar on tip of index finger; dressed in blue serge suit with a pair of gray trousers over same; belt buckle bearing the initial "H"; white shirt; low black shoes.

The local voiture has received a communication from Samuel Heller, grand chef de gare of the State organization, congratulating the local voiture upon its prominence in State circles, and promising to pay an official visit to Alexandria in October.

An abandoned automobile, found by Policemen James Bayliss and Embrey, at Washington and Montgomery streets, was stolen from Washington, it was ascertained yesterday by Detective Sergt. Edgar Sims, and has been returned to its owner.

Hillman Bayliss, who conducts a stall in the city market, reported to the police yesterday that his stall had been entered during the night of Thursday, and three chickens, valueud at $3.50, stolen. Entrance was gained by cutting the screen in the country part of the market.

Groups Will Study New Park Question

Maryland authorities will be invited to meet with the National Park and Planning Commission at its meeting next Tuesday when the question of whether the entrance to the city at Wisconsin avenue northwest is to be a circle or an oval will be decided, Capt. E. N. Chisolm, engineer, announced yesterday following a meeting of the commission.

This entrance, which is to lead in from Bethesda, Montgomery County, and other points, was originally planned as a circle, but the Maryland National Park and Planning Commission recently expressed a preference for an oval entrance.

At the meeting yesterday, the commission had before it the proposed treatment of the intersection of Massachusetts avenue and Nebraska avenue. This subject, too, was referred to the coordinating committee for further study. A suggestion has also been put forward that a large circle be created at that point, which is near the American University, and that a statue of Artemus Ward, Revolutionary hero, be placed in the circle.

Girl Lost Three Weeks Found Shut in Garage

Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 19.—Strangely missing from her home three weeks, Miss Zelma Lane, 18, of Cow Run, was found locked in an old garage building at Gaugersville, nine miles from Buckhannon, today by Sheriff H. A. Zickefoose, of Upshur County. She was lying on a pallet of straw on earth flooring covered with an old overcoat.

Carl Sims, 30, former convict of Cow Run, is alleged to have lured or kidnaped the girl from her home and officers are searching for him.

Raid Hero Named Legion Commande

Special to The Washington Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Sept. 19.—Frank Coffman, of Harrisonburg, corporal of the squad which suffered the first three American casualties on the front-line trenches during the World War, last night was elected commander of Rockingham Post of the American Legion. He was honored last week at the State Legion convention here, being chosen alternate committeeman for the Seventh District.

Mr. Coffman was the first Rockingham man to enlist in the American Army at the outbreak of the war. War Department records reveal that James P. Gresham, of Indiana; Merl D. Hay, of Iowa, and Thomas D. Enright, of Pittsburgh, were the first American soldiers shot down in the trenches in a surprise raid the night of November 2, 1917, near Bethlemen, France.

Coffman recalls that Gresham, Hay and Enright died within a few minutes of each other. The new legion commander is unable to explain how he escaped the attack.

INQUEST POSTPONED IN ACCIDENT CASE

INJURIES CAUSE DELAY

An inquest into the death of Ernest R. Livingstone, 61 years old, of Hyattsville, who was killed early yesterday morning when he was struck by a motorcycle at Rhode Island avenue and Melrose avenue, Hyattsville, has been postponed until next Friday. The inquest was postponed by Justice of the Peace Herbert J. Moffat, of Hyattsville, because of injuries sustained by the motorcycle operator, Allen Rossignal, 19 years old, of College Park, Md., who is in Emergency Hospital.

Mr. Livingstone, who was an employe of the Washington Times, had alighted from the 12:55 street car on his way home from work yesterday morning. He was struck by the motorcycle as he entered Rhode Island avenue. The motorcycle operator was thrown from his vehicle by the collision.

When the two men were taken to Emergency Hospital by a passing motorist Mr. Livingstone was pronounced dead. Rossignal was admitted to the hospital.

The coroner's jury, of which W. R. Beattie is foreman, viewed the body last night. Emergency Hospital aujuries as a fractured skull, lacerations on the leg and face and head. His condition was said to be serious, but not critical.

Society Youth Held As Baltimore Burglar

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 19 (A.P.).—A youth who while an active member of the younger society set here, lived in a supposedly vacant, partly furnished house in a suburb and got his food, police charge, from the grocery deliveries of neighbors, was indicted today for burglary and larceny.

The youth, Russell S. Ridgely, former student at an Eastern university, was charged with the theft of watches and other valuables from L'Hirondelle and Elkridge Kennel Clubs.

Republicans Plan Election Campaign

Montgomery County Workers Hold Session at Rockville.

Members of the Republican State central committee for Montgomery County met yesterday with the Republican candidates and workers of the county to discuss plans for the coming election campaign. The meeting was held in the Montgomery Country Club at Rockville.

Plans for getting out the Republican voters on the two registration days prior to the November election were discussed. F. Barnard Welsh, candidate for State's attorney, warned the workers against overconfidence, urging intensive work to bring about a Republican landslide in the November elections.

Paul Sleman, chairman of the State central committee, presided at the meeting. He also told the workers that success in November is predicated on hard work. Residents of the county must be told of the Republican program in order to create sufficient interest to bring them out to the polls, he said.

Central West Virginia In Drought Six Months

Special to The Washington Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 19.—With fair weather and no prospects of rain the central West Virginia territory today observed the half year of its unprecedented drought.

The last time rainfall caused stream flow in the section was on March 19. Three or four light showers in that time lasted only a few minutes. Water conservation measures are in effect throughout the region.

NIGHT RIDERS' GUNS TERRIFY MARYLAND

Anne Arundel and Calvert County Residents Are Disturbed by Shots.

MACHINES ARE CHASED

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 19.—While authorities have worked on the case throughout the day, not a clue developed as to the identity of the two carloads of men who early this morning terrorized the border line of Anne Arundel and Calvert Counties by firing repeater weapons.

Tracey's Landing, Owing Station, Friendship, Owensville, Sudley and other points in Anne Arundel County were the neighborhoods alarmed. The report has come from so many sections that authorities have accepted without question information that occupants of two speeding machines were firing rapidly as they sped along the narrow country roads, terrifying residents and outdistancing two deputy sheriffs.

In view of the neighborhood already alarmed by burglaries and the slaying of Benjamin Lyons at Owins, the firing early today finds residents in an angry mood, and ready to act if any recurrence of the firing should develop.

Reports Trickle In.

The first report of the rapid firing from machines was sent in by residents of Tracey's Landing shortly before midnight, from J. L. Clark's store, located on the Annapolis-Solomon's Island road. Shortly thereafter Thomas N. Prout, a special officer, and Owing Sears jumped into a machine and attempted to follow the speeding automobiles, which were firing away all the while.

Prout states that he was driving 65 miles an hour in pursuit and could not get within one-fourth of a mile of the marauders, although he managed to see a Maryland automobile license tag on one of the machines. "I followed them 8 miles, during which time it appeared as though they were firing at each other. However, nothing happened to either car.

Had bullets been fired they could not have survived at such a close range. At Mount Zion cross roads I lost the cars completely," Prout said.

Other Shots Reported.

At Friendship Earl and Sylvester Wayson reported the incident of the speeding machines from which rapid-fire explosions were emitting. It is believed that the night riders headed for Owingsville as Hugh Trout, the Rev. Reno Harp of the Episcopal Church, Miss Louisa Cheston and others distinctly heard the reports.

At Sudley's, Hutchin Gott's family was among those disturbed. They report that the machines twice passed the neighborhood. Lee Catterton, of Owings Station, a driver for the Standard Oil Co., was also awakened.

As no trace of bullets was found, some are inclined to believe that blanks were fired to frighten the people, many of whom were already in a nervous state, due to a wholesale group of robberies.

Lyons, on his deathbed, blamed his fate upon three Negro highwaymen, who he alleged slashed his throat from ear to ear before stripping him of more than $350.

The morning following the attack upon Lyons, a group of Negroes described as muscular and desperate appearing, stopped at William Klein's store at Chesapeake Beach. They adopted a threatening attitude, Mr. Klein said.

The Negroes were, according to Mr. Klein, driving a truck bearing District of Columbia license tags. The Negroes drove off toward Plum Point. Collison's filling station, near Forestville, Prince Georges County, has been robbed within the last few days, but a more recent burglarly was reported at Evans Dance Hall. There a cash register and a slot machine were carried away. The slot machine was later found along a lonely road broken open, but no trace of the cash register has been discovered.

In the same section the West River Postoffice, run by Samuel Chew, was recently entered and the safe carried away. The following morning it was found drilled open several miles from the postoffice.

The fact that the Negroes seen by Mr. Klein were driving a truck is believed by authorities to account for the fact that the safe, cash registers and slot machines were carried away. Meanwhile authorities of the three counties are investigating, while the Government is also looking into the theft fo the Postoffice safe.

Baltimore in Third Place in Shipping

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 19 (A.P.).—Baltimore rose to third position from fifth among all American harbors in the tonnage volume of foreign trade handled last year, with an increase of 21 per cent, it was announced today by the Association of Commerce.

The announcement was based on official figures of the Bureau of Research of the Shipping Board.

The new statistics, G. H. Pouder, director of the export and import bureau of the local association, said, put Baltimore behind only New York and New Orleans, moving ahead of Los Angeles and Buffalo. Philadelphia went to fifth place for the year and Buffalo to eighth, he said.

Suspect in Killing Wins Exoneration

Rocky Mount, Va., Sept. 19 (A.P.).—Ira J. Turner, who has spent much of the last three months trying to convince Franklin County authorities that he is not E. D. Saul, charged with killing Marshall King, near Henry, this county, in 1907, was free at noon today, recognized as Turner and on his way back to his former home at Broadway, Rockingham County.

Ten witnesses under oath, in a formal preliminary investigation, in the Circuit Court room here, with Judge P. H. Dillard presiding, testified that they had known Ira J. Turner for many years and that they are positive the defendant is that man.

Most of the witnesses said that they knew Turner prior to 1907, and one, a prominent Rockingham County man, said that Turner was working for him handling horses during the summer of 1907 and he felt certain Turner was not in Franklin County during that time.

TOWN PLANS WORK TO AID UNEMPLOYED

Frederick Votes $200,000 on Improvements After Crops Fail.

WILL BUILD RESERVOIR

Special to The Washington Post.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 19.—More than 500 representative citizens at a public meeting at the courthouse last night voted to spend $200,000 on municipal improvement to afford work for the laboring class who face unemployment this winter because of the drouth. The work, which will be started as soon as engineers can prepare plans, will be the construction of a new 49,000,000-gallon reservoir on Tuscarora Creek and elevating the dam of the present reservoir on Fishing Creek 5 feet, adding to its capacity 17,000,000 gallons.

The meeting was called by Mayor Culler, who recommended that the work be done to prevent many of the unemployed from asking charity. Because of the drouth none of the corncanning factories operated this year, keeping thousands of persons out of work, which many annually depended upon to provide winter fuel, pay their taxes and to lay in flour. In addition to this loss there was no corn to cut and husk, another source of revenue to the laboring class.

Both Sources Fail.

The canning factories usually operate from six to eight weeks beginning about the middle of June and corn cutting and husking immediately follows the canning season and continues almost until December. With both of these major sources of revenue cut off and no other work in sight, the economic situation became acute.

The meeting was attended by bankers, pastors of churches, business and professional men, and a large number of persons out of work. Mayor Culler, presiding, stated that many calls had already been made for charity. The drought, he added, caused a water shortage, which must be remedied in the near future. Instead of wating until next spring when city municipal work starts, he recommended that a new reservoir be built and an addition made to the old one at once in order to give work this fall and winter, and at the same time make a civic improvement that at best could not be delayed more than a year or two.

Following remarks by leading citizens, one of whom suggested spending $1,000,000, the recommendation of the mayor was indorsed. The mayor said today he will call a special meeting of the city authorities at once and start the improvements as soon as plans can be made for the work. Only home labor, as far as possible, will be employed.

Herds Are Reduced.

It is estimated that farmers who planted sugar corn for the factories lost $310,000, by the drought. Ten thousand acres was planted. The normal yield is two tons per acre, for which the factories contracted to pay $15.50 per ton. In some instances growers did not realize enough for their family table use. For the first time in the history of the canning industry in Maryland, Frederick County canneries, the largest in the State, did not operate. Many farmers packed the fodder in silos for winter cattle feed while others reduced their herds, unable to buy feed during the fall and winter.

A number of farmers have taken advantage of the reduced railroad rates to ship cattle feed and other farm products from States not seriously affected by the drought. A commission of prominent farmer-citizens is studying ways and means to help farmers over the winter.

Nine Face Chair Should Guard Die

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 19 (A.P.).—Steps to prevent further outbreaks at the Maryland State Penitentiary, where late Tuesday nine convicts were blocked in an escape attempt in which a guard was shot, perhaps fatally, were taken today.

Warden Patrick Brady revealed that 21 convicts, including six men serving life terms for murder, had plotted to escape and had marked a guard for death. The twelve who failed to try to scale the walls Tuesday either lost their nerve or were unable to leave the shops, the warden said he believed.

A 24-hour guard has been placed over Rawlings V. Whittemore, 26, serving 21 years for bank robbery, and identified as the man who shot Arthur F. Owen, a guard, with Owen's own pistol. Owen's condition remained critical today. Upon the outcome of his wound depends the fate of the nine who tried to flee. Should he die, murder indictments would be returned immediately against all, officials said.

Daily O'Currences

By JOHN DALY

OUT in the country, late at night, Luella and I had a time of it, reclaiming the stolen car. The constable had gone to bed. When we got him out the village garage was closed; but, eventually, we came sailing back to town in our beloved old boat—a little the worse for wear, but still making the grades.

"What we'll do tonight," said Luella, "is not only put the car in the garage, but lock it as well."

It was an old-fashioned lock, down near the base of the gear-shift; but it locked—and with the garage doors safely closed we felt quite secure from thieves.

Next night, invited to a bridge party, we hustled into our best evening clothes, Luella looking for all the world like a movie queen. She was mighty happy, her first night ou this season in the social swirl.

"What time does this party start?" I asked, by way of accelerating her final stand before the mirror.

"Oh, we've got lots of time. It doesn't get started till 9," she said, putting on another layer of powder.

* * * *

IF parting a fool and his money were as difficult as getting a woman away from a mirror the bunco-steerers would all go out of business, I mused, and almost got rapped over the head with a hair brush.

"You'd better see that you've got your hat," she flashed, "otherwise we'll spend half an hour looking for it."

None of the keys on my ring would open the gear-lock. Then it occurred to me I had given the key to Luella to keep; a long time ago.

"Where's the car?" she asked, impatiently, as I walked round the corner of the house.

"Where's the key?" I asked her.

* * * *

"WHAT key?"

"The key of the car?"

"How do I know?"

"I gave it to you this summer."

"You gave me the key?"

"Certainly."

"You didn't give me any key. If you did, I'd have it. Can't you get the car started?"

"Not without a key?"

"If you haven't got it, I don't know where it is."

Then it occurred to Luella. When we went on vacation, we loaned the car to a friend, turned over the keys and forgot to get them back—and the friend was now away on vacation.

When we got to the party, in a taxicab, the only hope for reconciliation was that somebody would deal Luella a perfect hand in spades.

DEPUTY, WITH AUTO, LEADS FIELD CHASE

CROWD AIDS IN PURSUIT

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 2324-W-2.

An impromptu posse received a thrill yesterday afternoon at the Fairfax County courthouse when a prisoner, who had just been ordered held for investigation by Justice of the Peace Thomas P. Chapman, attempted to make his escape from Deputy Sheriff Henry Magraity, who was taking him to the county jail.

The prisoner, who gave his name as John Jones, of Herndon, had been arrested at the home of E. Poole near Vienna. The man had asked Mrs. Poole if her husband was at home. On being informed that he was not but that the son was he stated he only wished to see the head of the house. He refused to leave the premises and began peeping in the windows. Becoming suspicious she called her son, who took the man to Fairfax and turned him over to the county authorities.

After leaving Justice Chapman's office with Deputy Sheriff Magarity, the prisoner ran. Persons in front of the courthouse, where court was in session, saw the incident and quickly spread the alarm and gave chase. The prisoner outdistanced his pursuers and took to the fields in the rear of the jail. Former Deputy Sheriff Wilson Darr, seeing the direction the prisoner was fleeing, jumped into his car and gave chase. Driving his car across a large field and jumping a large ditch with it he caught up with the man and held him till help arrived. The chase was for about a quarter of a mile. On his return to the jail the prisoner stated that his "nerves made him run."

A further investigation of the prisoner's story in Herndon by county authorities disclosed that a man of the same description was being sought by Deputy Sheriff and Town Sergt. Vernon Cocherille, of Herndon. The man had been living in Herndon at the home of Lucian Smith under the name of John Hall. He had visited several homes, and later a number of the homes were robbed. The Fairfax police are holding him for questioning in connection with these robberies at Herndon.

A number of cases were disposed of yesterday in the Fairfax County Circuit Court by Judge Walter McCarthy. Thomas Marshall, who pleaded guilty to driving while under the influence of ardent spirits, was fined $100 and costs and sentenced to 30 days in the county jail. John Tyler, indicted for second offense of violating the State prohibition law, pleaded guilty to the charge of possession of liquor, and was fined $50 and costs and sentenced to one year in jail. For good cause shown, the jail sentence was suspended, and he was allowed six months to pay the fine and costs.

Welfor Parrigan, who pleaded guilty to a presentment charging jail break while awaiting trial for a felony indictment, was sentenced to one year in jail. The jail sentence was suspended. Stanley Ayers, John Tyler and William, alias Binks, Paragon pleaded guilty to a charge of simple assault on Robert Smith, of Alexandria, and were fined $10 and costs each. Ayres was also placed on a $1,000 peace bond.

A misdemeanor jury found Ralph Mill, of West Falls Church, guilty of the sale of intoxicating liquor to County Policeman Lewis Finks. He was fined $25 and costs and sentenced to 3 months in jail. Judge McCarthy agreed to allow Mills to begin serving his sentence 60 days after date. Meanwhile he is at liberty under a $1,000 bond.

W. H. Egloff, a druggist, of Balston, Va., but working in Middleburg, Va., was found guilty by a jury of driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. The jury recommended that he be fined $100 and costs and sentenced to 30 days in jail. On motion of the defense counsel Judge McCarthy allowed Egloff his liberty on bond, so that he might adjust his business matters before starting to serve his term.

The Fairfax County Health Unit will conduct a children's health clinic this morning in its offices at Fairfax. This clinic will be for school children who have not been vaccinated or who wish a further health examination. A regulation adopted last year by the county school board requires that all school children this year must be vaccinated before they will be allowed to attend their classes.

MURDER IS CHARGED IN KELIHER'S DEATH

Shea and Garrison, Who Were in Car, Ordered Held After Hearing.

COURT DOUBTS STORIES

Police Court Judge William S. Snow, of Alexandria, yesterday ordered William J. Shea and Earl Garrison, of Washington, to be held on charges of murder and driving while drunk as a result of the death of Maurice ("Micky") Keliher following an automobile accident at Four Mile Run on September 7.

Keliher, who was a well-known Washington and Alexandria ball player, died in Emergency Hospital soon after the accident. At the hearing Judge Snow said that the testimony of Snow and Shea and other witnesses was the greatest mass of misinformation he had ever heard.

William McKeever, who also was involved in the accident, was released under $250 bond as a witness. McKeever, Shea and Garrison, were riding in the front seat of the roadster and Keliher was in a rumble seat. Shea and Garrison each denied that he was driving.
